RIOTING AGAIN BREAKS OUT IN OHIO'S PRISON

Machine Guns Trained on Hundreds Housed in "White City."

DISORDERS REFLECT HATRED OF WARDEN

Report on Disastrous Fire Due to Go to Cooper Today.

BIBLE TAKEN FROM INMATE HIDES KNIFE

Thomas to Retain Position as Head, Belief, Despite Enmity of Charges.

Columbus, Ohio, April 27 (A.P.).—Serious disorders were threatened at Ohio Penitentiary tonight as hundreds of prisoners housed in "White City" became restless and started shouting and breaking windows.

National Guardsmen, who have been on duty outside the walls since last Monday's fire, in which 320 convicts died, placed machine guns on the lawn in front of the prison just outside the cell block housing the unruly men. Warden P. E. Thomas and other prison officials went into conference to discuss the situation.

From outside the prison the convicts could be seen milling about on the cell block ranges. One man appeared to be shouting instructions to his fellow prisoners.

Machine Guns Trained.

The machine guns were trained on windows of "White City," which houses those prisoners kept idle because of lack of work. Another machine gun was placed at the main entrance of the penitentiary. It was placed at right angles so that it could sweep through the windows toward the shouting prisoners.

Charles Quinlan, a prisoner from Cleveland, quieted the men momentarily after he had talked with Capt. H. E. Lockhart, of the National Guard. The noise broke out again in a few minutes, however.

The windows broken by the convicts were those between "White City" and a new dormitory in the southeast corner fo the prison.

Knife Concealed in Bible.

The men started running up and down the ranges when some one shouted "roof fire."

No National Guardsmen were sent inside the prison. Additional troops arrived at the prison shortly after the disorders started. There were about 400 in all.

A Bible taken from one of the convicts was found to contain a knife and several saw blades.

Tonight's disturbance came shortly after it had been learned that 40 extra guards would be put on duty at the penitentiary tomorrow in an effort to end the "passive resistance" campaign against Warden Thomas. Previously the prisoners had been quiet, leading to the belief that there was no danger of a recurrence of last week's turmoil during which the men refused to do any work and threatened to kill guards unless Warden Thomas was removed.

Report Ready Today.

Harry French, chief of the Columbus police department, was called into the conference of prison officials.

The tensity subsided somewhat at 10 o'clock, although the convicts were still milling about. One group was reported to be talking over their plight, while others stood at the windows to watch the troop movements.

After a week of investigation into the Penitentiary fire the State's board of inquiry worked today to complete its report for submission tomorrow to Gov. Myers Y. Cooper, upon whom rests the task of fixing responsibility for last Monday's disaster.

With its report, the board, headed by Attorney General Gilbert Betman, will place before the governor 849 typewritten pages of testimony given by guards, convicts and prison officials, including Warden Preston E. Thomas, whose removal was demanded by maddened prisoners during the week of turmoil that followed the fire.

Warden Blames State

In considering the investigation report, Gov. Cooper will have nothing to indicate the cause of the conflagration, for most of the testimony was devoted to individual opinions regarding efforts to rescue the prisoners from their smoke-filled and burning cells. Some witnesses, including Albert Nice, chief of the Columbus Fire Department, declared that none would have perished had the guards unlocked the cells as soon as the fire was discovered.

Although the governor has not intimated the exact nature of the action he will take after studying the report, it appeared certain that he would recommend no change in the penitentiary's administrative personnel.

3,000 TO BE PRESENT AS CHAMBER MEETS

Sessions of National Body Open in Capital Today; Hoover Takes Part.

BARNES SEES PROGRESS

(Associated Press.)

While 3,000 business leaders converged upon Washington for the opening today of the eighteenth annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, a summary of business conditions showing "that American industry is fully carrying out the construction program forecast last December," was issued yesterday through the chamber.

The summary came from Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the National Business Survey Conference. It reported new capital of $1,584,000,000 obtained by corporations during the first quarter of 1930; call and time money at new low levels; an increase of savings bank deposits and building contracts totaling $1,100,000,000 for the year's first quarter.

Touching briefly upon virtually every major line of industry, the survey was expected to furnish a foundation for the four-day discussion between Government officials and business leaders of problems jointly concerning them.

President Hoover and members of the cabinet with their aids will participate. Such questions as stabilization and employment, Federal Farm board policies, railroad consolidation,

Mrs. Hoover Again Takes to Outdoors

Convalescent Goes Into Open Air for First Time in Two Weeks.

(Associated Press.)

For the first time in two weeks, Mrs. Herbert Hoover went outdoors yesterday, enjoying the warm spring sunshine from the south portico of the White House.

With the President at her side, Mrs. Hoover spent a half-hour after luncheon, chatting and watching the dogs from the White House kennels frisking on the lawn. She sat in the wheelchair, which has been her constant companion since she wrenched her back painfully a fortnight ago.

Mr. Hoover attended the morning service at the Friends Meeting House and spent the rest of the day quietly at home.

HOTEL GUEST'S NAME CENTER OF BAKER HUNT

Man Who Left Alexandria on Night of Murder Object of Search.

OLD SUITOR OF GIRL IS THOUGHT IN OHIO

Police Asked to Check His Movements as Picture Is Discovered.

HOSTELRY SUSPECT PAID ALL HIS BILLS

Bag Found in Room Not Left to Evade Payment, as at First Thought.

Authorities searching for the slayer of Mary Baker were last night concentrating on the identity of a man who disappeared from an Alexandria hotel on the night of the murder. While pursuit of this clew was being made the police were also trying to locate a man who courted Miss Baker several years ago and whose picture was obtained Saturday at the Oak Grove, Va., home of the girl.

The guest at the Alexandria hotel registered as a salesman and spent the two nights preceding the murder at the hotel. Each day he paid in advance for his room. He said nothing about leaving and owed no money at the hostelry.

After several days employes entered his room and removed the inexpensive black suitcase which they gave to Arlington County authorities on Saturday. An attempt is being made to trace the man, who is said to resemble the one who was seen beating Miss Baker while in her automobile.

Picture Is Discounted.

Officer Hugh Jones, of Arlington County, obtained the picture of a former admirer of the Baker girl while on a mission to Oak Grove on Saturday. Little significance is attached to it. Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth believes it to be that of a man who formerly courted Miss Baker and has since married and is living in Ohio.

Mr. Gloth had known previously of his courtship of the girl. Police of the icty where the man makes his home wil be asked to check hs activities.

Clerks at the Alexandria Hotel told police that their guest was about 35 years old and about 5 feet 10 inches in height. His general description is similar to the man sought by police as the murderer. On the register he gave his residence as Richmond, Va.

Chain Store Mna, Was Claim.

During his stay at the hotel he told employes that he was employed by a chain store company and was arranging for the establishment of a new branch store of his company in Alexandria. When he registered he told the clerk that he would probably be a permanent guest at the hotel. On a few occasions he inquired about bus service to Richmond.

On April 9, when he first appeared in Alexandria, he talked with an automobile salesman regarding the purchase of a car.

To the automobile salesman he represented himself as a salesman of a Southern Lumber Co. He also told the automobile salesman that his home was in Richmond. On the following day he again talked with the automobile salesman and told him at the time that he had several persons to see in Washington and wanted to buy a car.

The man told the automobile salesman that he would be very busy

Gen. George Barnett Is Dead at Age of 70

War Commandant of Marine Corps Succumbs to Heart Ailment and Pneumonia at Naval Hospital; Family at Bedside.

Maj. Gen. George Barnett, 70 years old, commandant of the United States Marine Corps during the World War and one of the most notable veterans of the Nation's military service, died at 4:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the United States Naval Hospital after a lingering illness.

Death was attributed to heart trouble, which necessitated his removal to the hospital about nine months ago from his home at 1712 R street northwest. With brief intervals at his home for recuperation, he reentered the hospital on the eve of his birthday on December 9, his condition slowly declining since that time. About four days ago he suffered a relapse, and with the contraction of pneumonia, his condition had grown steadily worse yesterday morning. Death had been expected momentarily for hours before the end.

At his bedside were his wife, Mrs. George Barnett; a stepson, Basil Gordon; a stepdaughter, Mrs. Henry Suydam, wife of the Washington correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle; and his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nixon, of Minneapolis, Minn.

While full funeral arrangements had not been completed last night, services will be conducted at the Church of the Epiphany by the Rev. Z. Barney Phillips, probably Wednesday, followed by interment with full military honors in Arlington Cemetery in a section reserved for members of his class of 1881 at the Naval Academy.

A resident of Washington intermittently since 1886, Maj. Gen. Barnett was widely known here aside from his distinguished service achievements before he was elevated to the post of commandant as the highest rank in the Marine Corps here in 1914, about the time of the outreak of the World War. Except for a comparatively brief time, he had made his home in Washington continuously since then.

Since his retirement from the service on his birthday in 1923 he had

SMASHUPS KILL FIVE IN WASHINGTON AREA

Two Die as Train Hits Car Near Front Royal, Va.; Two More on Curve.

WOMAN HIT-RUN VICTIM

Automobile crashes, one a grade crossing accident, claimed five lives and injured several others more or less critically yesterday in Maryland and Virginia within close proximity to Washington.

At Death Curve, a highway bend about 15 miles east of Frederick, Md., famous as a death trap, two men were killed at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon when the automobile in which they were riding plunged from the road, overturned, and crushed them beneath, leaving two children unhurt and another child injured slightly.

The victims were James Savanas, 46 years old, proprietor of a seafood shop in Frederick, driver of the machine, and O. Earl Insley, 40 years old, an employe of the Maryland House of Correction and a resident of Dorsey in Anne Arundel county. Insley's three children, ranging from 4 to 8 years in age, miraculously escaped, only the eldest suffering lacerations on the head.

A few minutes earlier the wives of the men, riding in another car, had rounded the curve ahead of them en route to Dorsey, where Mr. and Mrs. Savanas planned to spend the night after a visit during the day by Mr. and Mrs. Insley, with their children.

There were no other motorists on the curve at the time the accident

RUM BUYER'S GUILT TO BE ARGUED TODAY

Two Test Cases on Dry Law Will Come Up Before Supreme Court.

MITCHELL SEEKS RULING

(Associated Press.)

Whether the purchaser of liquor is guilty as well as the seller will be before the Supreme Court for argument today.

This, the latest of several prohibition enforcement problems which the court has consented to pass upon, will come up in two forms, each a Government test case to ascertain whether prohibition agents extend their enforcing operations to arrest bootleggers' customers.

Attorney General Mitchell, who may, before long become charged with the duty of prohibition enforcement through transfer of this activity from the Treasury, has been taking an active part in seeking to obtain from the highest tribunal the final word on many disputed prohibition questions, confident that the Government will be materially aided when the Supreme Court has spoken.

The court is being asked to decide whether purchase of bootleg liquor is a violation of the prohibition law.

In a case from Philadelphia brought by the Government against Alfred E. Morris, a New York banker, the Government will contend that those who order from bootleggers knowing that illicit transportation will be involved in delivering the

90 Cities' Population 22.5 Per Cent Larger

First Indication of Country's Growth Since 1920 Comes in Census Reports From Municipalities Having 10,000 or More Inhabitants.

(Associated Press.)

A growth of 22.5 per cent in population during the last ten years is shown by the first 90 cities of 10,000 or more inhabitants for which enumerations in the 1930 census have been announced.

This first indication of the trend of the country's population is furnished by a compilation made by the Associated Press from the official preliminary announcements of supervisors throughout the country.

The country's growth as a whole in the decade ending with 1930 was 14.9 per cent, while in the previous decade ending with 1910 it was 21 per cent. Growth of the country's urban population—that is, people living in places of 2,500 or more inhabitants—showed an increase of 28.7 per cent in the decade ending with 1920, and for the previous decade it was 34.8 per cent.

Only one of the country's larger cities has reported thus far. It is Atlanta, which reported 266,557 persons, an increase of 35.6 per cent over 1920.

Of the cities thus far reporting, the largest percentages of increase have been shown by Ventura, Calif., with 186.3 per cent; Lakeland, Fla., with 130.2 per cent, and Decatur, Ga., with 121.2 per cent. Cities showing 50 per cent or more increase in the ten years are mostly in the South and West. None with that large an increase has been reported yet in the East. Half a dozen cities have shown decreases from ten years ago. Three of these are in the East, including Fall River, Mass., which showed a decline of 5.3 per cent and now has 114,348 people, and three are in the Southwest.

There were 746 cities of 10,000 or more population in 1920. Cities in that category are expected to show a considerable increase in the present census. Several already have entered the 10,000 class, including Longview, Wash., which was not in existence in 1920, and now has 10,491 people.

The population and percentage of increase since 1920 of some of the cities of 10,000 or more thus far reported, follow:

Atlanta, Ga., 266,557, or 35.6; San Juan, P. R., 114,585, or 60.3; Roanoke, Va., 69,096, or 35.9; Mount Vernon, N. Y., 60,869, or 42.4; New Rochelle, N. SIX ARE KILLED AS PLANE DIVES ON SPECTATORS

Boy and Girl Are Dead of Burns in Another Air Crash.

PILOT AND FRIEND DIE IN THIRD FALL

Two in Throng Craft Struck Not Expected to Live.

AVIATOR IS HURT IN RESCUE ATTEMPT

Jammed Rudder Is Cause of Tragedy at Wisconsin Airport.

Fayetteville, Tenn., April 27 (A.P.). Six spectators among a large crowd, gathered here to watch an air circus sponsored by the American Legion Post, were killed and 20 others were injured today as a stunting plane crashed into the onlookers.

The dead: Booney Beard, 14; Kelly Towry, 23; Lawrence Smith, 28; Monroe Marbury, 37; Hurley Spray, 26, and Marvin Ashby, 30.

Of those injured, doctors said two were expected to die. They are Claude Copeland, 30, and J. M. Douthitt, 75. Little hope also was held for the recovery of Nannie May Ortner, 4, and Rose Counts, 25.

The plane, piloted by Milton Covert, of Columbia, Tenn., fell from a height of about 10 feet. Mr. Covert and two companions were nearing the landing field in the plane, when, witnesses said, the ship nose dived, crashing into the crowd standing on a railroad embankment. The pilot and his companions were not injured.

Legion Men Give First Aid.

The parents of the Ortner girl, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Ortner, and another child, J. B. Ortner, 10, also were hurt, but not seriously. Two Negro boys suffered the loss of both legs.

Members of the Legion Post, under Clarence Coughran, commander, took charge of the field and rendered aid to the injured and removed the dead.

Capt. Al Gombert, of Akron, Ohio, in charge of the circus, said officials had warned the spectators not to stand on the embankment, because all planes had to sweep close over it in landing.

Approximately 100 were said to have been on the embankment at the time of the crash. All the dead were from nearby communities in Lincoln County.

Boy and Girl Burn in Crash.

Portsmouth, N. H., April 27 (A.P.). A boy and a girl burned to death after an airplane crash beside the Portsmouth Country Club this afternoon The dead were Geneva Brockett, 14, of Suffield, Conn., and Bruce Heffler, 14, of Greenland. The pilot, Clyde Robinson, of Exeter, was burned badly.

The children earlier in the day had been given their first airplane ride by Robinson and had been eager to go again. Robinson was making for the Portsmouth airport from the Heffler farm, in Greenland, when the engine stalled. In attempting to land on a road, a wing caught on a tree and the plane burst into flames as it crashed.

Robinson was thrown clear and tried to pull the children out. He was seriously burned about the face, hands and chest in the vain attempt and was taken to a hospital at Exeter.

The flames from the plane started a brush fire, which swept over 6 acres and threatened the Country Club-

8,000 Hear Curley Praise Dry Law, Hit Arms Parley

Brotherly Love Must Displace Tonnage Figures, Says Archbishop, Speaking Before Holy Name Society in Convention at Catholic University.

Archbishop Michael J. Curley, speaking before more than 8,000 Holy Name Society members gathered at the Catholic University of America for their annual convention yesterday, devoted part of his talk to prohibition and the naval reduction parley.

"If prohibition has failed," he said, it has been because there has been no wholehearted enforcement. The best way to repeal a bad law is to enforce it, and we should give it a fair trial, if for nothing more than an experiment. A law should not be obeyed because it is a law, but because it is for the common good. With all the contention and argument about our present system of laws, there is a steadily growing tendency today to forget God and grow more into worldly things, and that is what men of the Holy Name Societies are trying to fight. We must, because so few others are trying to do it."

"European peoples call conventions 'parleys'," he said, "and they have the right name. In French, parley means 'to talk,' and that is about all that has been done during the recent gathering of nations.

"No peace movement has ever resulted in peace which was not founded on Christianity," the Archbishop declared, "and we will never accomplish anything while we negotiate in terms of ships and tonnage. Brotherly love, friendship, and trust must be brought into consideration before Nations will begin thinking of an end to war."

The convention opened yesterday with a Pontifical High Mass at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception

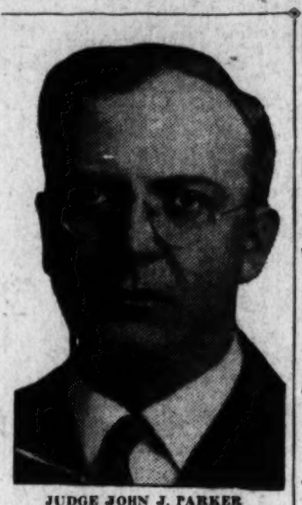
JUDGE PARKER DEFENDS SELF IN BENCH ACTS



JUDGE JOHN J. PARKER

Followed Supreme Court, He Declares on Eve of Confirmation Fight.

LETTER TO OVERMAN IS ANSWER TO LABOR

Was Absolutely Bound by Rulings in Yellow Dog Case, He Asserts.

ALSO DENIES CLAIM OF RACE PREJUDICE

Jurist's Statement Blasts Chance of Last-Minute Withdrawal of Name.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

On the eve of the consideration by the Senate of his nomination for the Supreme Court, Judge John J. Parker yesterday took up his own defense.

In a letter to Senator Overman, of North Carolina, and made public by him, Judge Parker disclaimed any prejudice against the Negro race and defended his action in the celebrated "yellow dog" labor case. In this latter he says he was absolutely bound by Supreme Court decisions.

The so-called "yellow dog" contract by which West Virginia miners agreed not to join the union was directly upheld in 1914 in the case of Coppage vs. Kansas, 26 U. S. 1, Judge Parker wrote, and again "directly upheld" in the Hitchman case.

Decision Upheld Injunction.

"In view of this," he said, "it must be obvious to any one that, as a member of the court in the Red Jacket case, I had no latitude or discretion in expressing my opinion or views of my own, but was bound by these decisions to reach the concrusion and to render the decision that I did."

The decision that the judge rendered upheld a lower court injunction against union officials restraining them from seeking to get the West Virginia miners to break their contracts and join the union. The injunction even restrained "persuasion" on the part of the union.

The judge's contention that he was bound by previous Supreme Court decisions contains in a nutshell the conflict between his philosophy and that of the senators opposing him. There is no question but that the Supreme Court had rendered these decisions. The senators opposing Judge Parker on the labor grounds contend that in determining another case he was not bound by these decisions, that he could have exercised an independence of judgment or, as Senator Norris, of Nebraska, says, have shown in his decision that he was not in sympathy with the higher court's ruling, thereby "showing a friendly spirit for labor."

Hitchman Case Similar.

In the Hitchman case, Judge Parker says, the Supreme Court had reversed it for not upholding an injunction based on the same premises as the "yellow dog" case. As to the senators' contention that he did not have to abide by the Supreme Court rulings, Judge Parker says:

"It is, of course, the duty of the judges of the lower Federal Courts to follow the decisions of the Supreme Court. Any other course would result in chaos."

Of the Negro opposition, Judge Parker said:

"I regard the Constitution and all of its amendments as the fundamental and supreme law of the land, and I deem it the first duty of a judge to give full scope and effect to all of their provisions. In the discharge of my duties as circuit judge I have never hesitated, I hope and believe, to meet this obligation to the fullest degree."

Answers Negro Charges.

HERBERT FAHY DEAD AFTER PLANE CRASH

Noted Pilot Failed to Regain Consciousness Following Michigan Accident.

WIFE ESCAPED INJURY

Grayling, Mich., April 28 (A.P.).—Herbert J. Fahy, noted aviator, died in a hospital here today of injuries suffered in an airplane accident near Roscommon, Mich., last Friday.

Fahy, who was 33 years old, did not regain consciousness after he was taken from an overturned airplane on the estate of Cliff Durant.

His wife, Mrs. Claire Fahy, also a noted pilot, was with him in the plane at the time of the accident, but escaped injury because she was in a separate cabin. Mrs. Fahy is one of the ranking women pilots of the country, having done most of her flying on the West Coast.

Fahy was employed as test pilot and salesman for a Detroit airplane concern, and had gone to Roscommon to sell a plane to Durant. The plane turned over as he was attempting to Hoover Expected to Make Position Known Within Few Days.

(Associated Press.)

The presence here of a number of prominent Republican party leaders has revived the report that Claudius H. Huston is about to retire as Republican national chairman.

Several of these leaders have been in conference with President Hoover, with whom the decision as to retention of Mr. Huston is believed to rest. In some quarters it is expected that the President will make his position clear within a few days. Some of the President's advisers believe there should be no change in the chairmanship just on the eve of a congressional campaign, but others continue to take the position that recent disclosures of Mr. Huston's activities as an official of the Tennessee River Improvement Association make his retention inadvisable.

Most of the Republican leaders who are here from various sections of the country came to Washington to attend Friday night's Gridiron Club dinner, but they have taken the opportunity to talk over the chairmanship and various other party questions.

Republican candidate for governor in 1920, the judge said he at no time advocated denying them the vote, but only argued against Democratic charges that the Republicans sought to organize them.

"My effort then," he said, "was to answer those who were seeking to inject the race issue into the campaign under a charge that the Republican party of North Carolina intended to organize the colored people and restore the conditions of the reconstruction era. I knew the baneful effect of such a campaign and sought to avoid it." He said that for years the best men of both races had been seeking to create friendly relations between the races.

"I endeavored to conduct my campaign for governor on a high plane and with fairness to all classes of the people," he said, "and, while I made it clear that my party was not seeking to organize the colored people of the State as a class, I at no time advocated denying them the right to participate in the election in cases where they were qualified to do so, nor did I advocate denying them any other of their rights under the Constitution and laws of the United States."

Fight to Go to Finish.

Judge Parker's statement at this time discloses that the last-minute efforts of Republican senators to have the President withdraw his name or to have the judge withdraw have been unavailing and that the fight will go on. The statement follows:

My dear Senator Overman: I have received the copy of the record of the hearing on the charges or grounds of opposition to my confirmation as justice of the Supreme Court which you so kindly sent me. From a reading of the record there seems to be only two protests: One by the American Federation of Labor criticizing my decision in the Red Jacket coal case, 18 Fed. (2d) 839, and the other by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, criticizing statements made in my campaign for Governor of North Carolina ten years ago, and expressing the fear that I might not enforce the provisions of the Constitution guaranteeing the rights of colored people.

My answer to the charge of the labor people is that I followed the law as laid down by the Supreme Court. This, I think, has been demonstrated in memoranda filed with the judiciary committee, and I shall not elaborate upon it. It is, of course, the duty of the judges of the lower federal courts to follow the decisions of the Supreme Court. Any other course would result in chaos.

Cites "Yellow-Dog" Authorities.

Much has been said as to the so-called "yellow-dog" contract, under which an employe agrees not to join the union while remaining in the service of his employer. This form of contract was directly upheld in 1915 in the case of Coppage vs. Kansas, 236 U. S. 1, in which the Supreme Court held void a State statute, making it unlawful for a corporation to require the execution of such a contract as a condition of employment. It was again directly upheld in the Hitchman case, which, like the Red Jacket case, came from West Virginia and went from the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Fourth Circuit to the Supreme Court of the United States. In view of this, it must be obvious to any one that, as a member of the court in the Red Jacket case, I had no latitude or discretion in expressing my opinion or views of my own, but was bound by these decisions to reach the conclusion and to render the decision that I did.

On the appeal in the Red Jacket case, the validity of the contracts and the scope of the injunction, as a matter of fact, were not seriously contested, as counsel doubtless realized that we were bound by the Supreme Court's decision in the Hitchman case. The principal point pressed before us related to the jurisdiction of the court; but this was clearly controlled by the decision in the second Coronado case, 268, U. S. 295.

Case Misunderstood, He Says.

In passing, I would call attention to the fact that the Red Jacket case seems to be much misunderstood. The injunction therein did not prevent employees from quitting work or joining a union. In fact, it was not a suit between employers and employees, at all, but between mine owners, on the one hand, who had made contracts with their employees not to join the union, and the union, on the other, which sought, not only by inducement and persuasion, but also by violence and intimidation, to induce the employees, in violation of their contracts, to join the union and go on a strike. The Supreme Court held in the Hitchman case that this might not lawfully be done and reversed the Circuit Court of Appeals of this circuit for not enjoining, under similar circumstances, peaceful persuasion, as well as violence and intimidation.

The protest of the Colored People seems to be based upon the fear that I might not enforce the provisions of the Constitution in so far as same guarantees their rights. Needless to say, such fear is entirely groundless. I regard the Constitution and all of its amendments as the fundamental and supreme law of the land, and I deem it the first duty of a judge to give full scope and effect to all of their provisions. In the discharge of my duties as Circuit Judge, I have never hesitated, I hope and believe, to meet this obligation to the fullest degree.

The effort to interpret some statements alleged to have been made ten years ago in a speech in a political campaign as indicating a contrary disposition, is wholly unjustified. My effort then was to answer those who were seeking to inject the race issue into the campaign under a charge that the Republican Party of North Carolina intended to organize the Colored People and restore the conditions of the Reconstruction era. I knew the baneful effort of such a campaign and sought to avoid it. For years the best men of both races in the state had been seeking to create friendly sentiments and peaceful relations between the races; and I did not want their efforts to be sacrificed, or the party, whose nominee I was, to be embarrassed, by the raising of a false issue of this character.

Denies Race Prejudice.

I understand that a number of reports, not contained in the record nor supported by the statement of any person, have been circulated against me. Those of which I have heard are so obviously absurd and untrue that it would seem that no answer to them would be necessary, and I shall not dignify them by notice here other than to say that they are untrue and entirely misrepresent my attitude. I endeavored to conduct my campaign for Governor on a high plane and with fairness to all classes of the people; and, while I made it clear that my party was not seeking to organize the Colored People of the state as a class, I at no time advocated denying them the right to participate in the election in cases where they were qualified to do so, nor did I advocate denying them any other of their rights under the Constitution and laws of the United States. Any charge or intimation that I appealed to race prejudice is most unjust. I deplored the appeal to race prejudice and did my utmost to eliminate it from the campaign.

In conclusion let me say that I have no prejudice whatever against the Colored People and no disposition to deny them any of their rights or privileges under the Constitution and the laws. I think that my record as a Judge of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, in a circuit where many of them reside, shows that I have no such prejudice or disposition.

I have written you this letter because I desire that you, as one of the Senators from my state, and a member of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, understand my position with respect to the protests filed against me. You may make such use of the letter as you deem proper.

With great respect, I am

Sincerely yours,

JOHN J. PARKER.

Richmond Bar Head Answers Editorial

The following copy of a telegram to the New York World was released yesterday by Leon M. Nelson, president of the Richmond Bar Association:

"I have read the editorial appearing in your paper of the 23d instant, and, as president of the Richmond Bar Association, the bar of which city has unanimously indorsed Judge Parker's appointment, I am wiring to protest against your estimate of Judge Parker, and ask that you give this protest some prominence in your newspaper.

"In the five years' period Judge Parker has been on the bench, the Richmond bar has recognized him as a capable and able judge.

"During this period Judge Parker has heard and participated in the decision of more than 450 cases and has written the opinion of the court in 184 of those cases. Many of those opinions involved questions of far-reaching importance and have invariably shown thorough preparation and sound judicial judgment.

"A careful examination of his work of the circuit court of appeals will convince any unbiased mind that he does possess abilities as a jurist which entitle him to rank with the able judges of this country. He has discharged the duties of his present high judicial position with untiring industry, courage and impartiality; and the lawyers of Virginia regard him as possessing in a remarkable degree all the qualifications necessary for service on the Supreme Court.

"Mr. Mark Sullivan was unquestionably right in his statement, appearing in the New York Herald Tribune on April 23, that his name would certainly be included in any list of 5 circuit judges out of the 40 in the whole country who are best equipped for elevation to the Supreme Court.

"We feel that if Judge Parker is confirmed by the Senate he will fully sustain the dignity and purity, ability and learning of the Supreme Court Bench, and the bar of this city feels that his defeat on the grounds on which the attack against him is based would be a blow at the independence of the judiciary.

LEON M. NELSON,
President Richmond Bar Association.

Fascists Accept 90,000 Recruits

Ceremonies of Initiation Are Staged in All Parts of Italy.

Rome, April 27 (A.P.).—Throughout Italy today the Fascist party held ceremonies bringing more than 90,000 recruits of 18 years or over into the ranks of the adult "black shirts." The ceremony at Rome took place in the presence of Il Duce, cheered enthusiastically by a great crowd.

In all the provincial centers, the "Avanguardisti," members of the Fascist advance guard, trained for four years in sports, military maneuvers and civic discipline, were inducted into party membership and given the carbines of militiamen.

To replace those who graduated today, more than 110,000 14-year-old boys of the "balilla" organization of Fascist youth were initiated into the "Avanguardia."

Woman Faces Mind Test After Deaths in Family

Los Angeles, April 27 (A.P.).—Mrs. Mary B. Hartman, held on suspicion of murder in connection with deaths of her husband and a daughter and son, was ordered committed to the psychopathic ward of the General Hospital today for observation.

Mrs. Hartman was arrested after her daughter, Ruth Hartman, 14, died, authorities said, from the effects of a poison. Her husband died mysteriously three years ago, and a son, Henry, died in 1929. The bodies of the latter two have been exhumed, and vital organs are being tested. The district attorney's office announced that reports from the psychopathic ward as to Mrs. Hartman's condition will determine whether murder charges or an insanity complaint will be drawn.

LULL BEFORE STORM SEEN IN INDIA QUIET

Peshawar Disorders Let Up, but Government Fears More May Occur.

WOMEN WARN VICEROY

London, April 27 (A.P.).—A cessation of disorders in various important centers of the Indian peninsula was indicated tonight in dispatches from India, though some observers feared this might be a lull before a storm.

The government fears that trouble from the civil disobedience movement and from native agitators more violent than those associated with Mahatma Gandhi is by no means over.

At Ambheti, Gandhi held a meeting in commemoration of the death of Vithal Das, one of his volunteers who was killed by a falling palm tree he was cutting down under his leader's orders.

"All wives and mothers should wish for their sons and husbands a similar death," Gandhi told the other volunteers and a large audience of women. "I who am sitting on the threshold of death covet a similar end. It is better to die than to remain slaves."

Will Write Lord Irwin.

Gandhi, who intends to cover the distance from Aradi Matbad to Dharsana on foot in two or three days, is expected to draft a letter to the Viceroy of India, Lord Irwin, tomorrow, which is his weekly day of silence.

At Peshawar, capital of the outpost northwest frontier province, from which European women and children have been evacuated during the last few days as a result of riots on Wednesday, all was reported quiet. Aiding in the effort to keep the peace, volunteers of the All-India Congress party kept watch all night, but no untoward incident occurred.

Five congress party leaders summarily tried at Risalpur were ordered to furnish security, in default of which they were to go to prison for three years. They chose to go to prison and were transferred to a jail in the Punjab.

At Simla, Lord Irwin promulgated a press ordinance reviving the press act of 1910 with amendment. This provides drastic punishment for newspapers inciting the populace to violence.

Women Back Disobedience.

At Ahmadabad, a labor center close by Gandhi's college of devotees, or Ashram, Mme. Mahadev Desai Ansuyaben, labor leader, and ten other women sent a letter to the viceroy declaring they fully sympathized with the civil disobedience campaign.

"The women in the villages have already begun manufacturing contraband salt, but we women should find an additional field for our activities.

"We readily accept Gandhi's suggestion that we are better fitted to carry out the boycott on foreign cloth and prohibition of liquor through picketing shops.

"As we intend to undertake this movement, we beg to impress upon your excellency that it is the function of the state to stop the traffic in liquor and other intoxicants as well as the importing of foreign cloth."

At Calcutta, the Indian Bicycle Traders Association decided not to import British bicycles and accessories for a period of three months.

take off from a field on the Durant estate. The craft was believed to have struck a stump.

Formerly an Army flier, Fahy set a solo endurance record of 36 hours 56 minutes and 36 seconds in May, 1929. Last July he attempted to set a new record for a round trip transcontinental flight with one stop, but was forced down in Kansas on the eastbound trip. He was injured in a crash at Burbank, Calif., last September.

paid by individuals dropped approximately $40,000,000 to $306,000,000. Miscellaneous taxes for the same quarter amounted to $145,921,879, a decrease of about $900,000 over the same quarter a year ago.

New York State led the way with the total taxes collected in the nine months returning $695,048,510 and accounted for most of the total increase adding $100,000,000 more taxes this year than last. Of that increase $99,000,000 was due to income taxes.

While New York piled up the enormous amount of taxes, 25 States showed smaller totals than in the same period last year. The States which showed decreased total collections were Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Maine, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Twenty-eight States and one Territory showing decreased income tax paid into the Government Treasury were Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Territory of Hawaii, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

In total taxes North Carolina was second with $200,898,820, an increase of approximately $16,000,000, though the State's income tax dropped $1,700,000. Illinois ranked third with a total of $185,743,426, an increase of $14,000,0000; Pennsylvania fourth, with $171,625,444, a drop of $6,000,000, and California fifth with a total of $115,136,433, showing an increase in income and a decrease in miscellaneous tax. The total was approximately $2,000,000 more than in the same period of last year, income taxes amounting to $97,057,720, an increase of $3,200,000, and miscellaneous taxes to $18,078,713, a drop of approximately $1,200,000.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, April 27 (A.P.).—The start of the Graf Zeppelin's flight to South America was set today for May 18 after a conference between Dr. Hugo Eckener and Capt. Ernst Lehmann, the first officer, who commanded the Graf on the London trip yesterday. The Zeppelin landed here early this morning after completing the round trip to London.

occurred, according to a reconstructed story by police, when Savanas apparently misjudged the distance in turning. The car careened sharply to the side of the road, toppled into a 2 foot ditch and overturned, killing the two men almost instantly as it rolled upon them. The three children were thought to have been in the back seat.

Passing motorists a short time later removed the children to a nearby farm house where the oldest child was given first aid treatment.

Frederick police investigated the accident, and reported that an inquest would be unnecessary.

Crashing into an automobile at an unobstructed grade crossing on the outskirts of Front Royal, Va., Southern passenger train No. 12, bound from Harrisonburg to Washington, late yesterday killed two prominent residents of Stephens City, Frederick County.

The pair, both apparently killed instantly, were James L. Gardner, 65 years old, well-known contractor and lumber dealer of Stephens City, and Miss Nellie Dean, 47 years old, proprietor of the Rose Hedge Tavern in that town.

The tragedy occurred when the automobile, with Gardner at the wheel and Miss Dean as his companion, passed over the Shenandoah River Bridge about one mile north of Front Royal and started across the railroad tracks along a road leading to Morgan's duck ranch, where Gardner evidently intended to call upon its owner, John Morgan, a long-time friend.

Car Carried 100 Yards.

As the machine proceeded on the tracks, the train roared over the crossing, throwing Gardner out, grinding his body beneath the locomotive as it plowed onward for almost 100 yards and carrying the car with Miss Dean trapped inside almost the entire distance until it flung it aside, demolished. Her body was found in the wreckage.

Commonwealth's Attorney John H. Downing and Sheriff R. F. Collins started an investigation and detained the train for more than a half hour to interrogate members of the crew and the engineer, who declared that from his position on the right-hand side of the locomotive he had not seen the approach of the machine from the left.

Gardner, a widower, is survived by three sons, J. C. and John Gardner, of Stephens City, and Wilbur, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a daughter, residing in Shenandoah County.

Miss Dean is survived by a sister, Helen Dean, proprietor of a beauty parlor in Winchester, and two brothers, Charles and Julian Dean, of Chester, Pa.

Another Woman a Victim.

Mrs. Leslie Green, of 933 Serrill avenue, Yeadon, Pa., died shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Alexandria Hospital as the result of a fracture at the base of the skull received in an automobile accident between 8:30 and 9 o'clock yesterday morning near Engleside, on the Richmond highway, about 7 miles south of Alexandria.

The automobile in which she was a passenger was driven by her brother, Harry McCormick, of the same address. Other passengers were Miss Alice Mitchell, of Glenthorne road, Stonehurst, Pa., who received severe cuts about the ears and a scalp wound; Mrs. Hargrove, of 15 East Pleasant street, Baltimore, who is in a critical condition, due to being severely crushed about the body, and Mrs. James Boggs, of Norfolk, who sustained a severe scalp wound. The women are all patients in the Alexandria Hospital, but McCormick was only slightly cut and is staying in a nearby hotel.

The car they were in was going south and was sideswiped by another automobile going in the same direction and occupied by two negroes, who did not stop and have so far not been apprehended.

DINNER TO HONOR BISHOP M'NAMARA

250 Laymen to Be Present at Banquet Tendered by St. Gabriel's Parish.

SOCIETY TO BE FORMED

More than 250 laymen of St. Gabriel's Catholic Church, and representatives of the clergy and laity of the diocese of Baltimore will attend the testimonial dinner to be given by the men of St. Gabriel's Parish at the Mayflower Hotel tomorrow night in honor of the pastor of the church, the Right Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore. It was announced yesterday that arrangements for the affair had been completed and that Paul Delany, of Philadelphia, will be master of ceremonies for the affair.

The dinner was arranged to mark the celebration by the laymen of the parish of the tenth anniversary of the founding of the parish, which was instituted by Bishop McNamara in 1920. The affair will be an expression of the appreciation of the men of the parish for the bishop's decade of service, and will be the occasion for the formation of a Builders Society, which will undertake to manage a campaign to raise funds to finance the completion of the new church building now under construction at Grant Circle. It is planned to have the new edifice furnished and ready for occupancy by Christmas, as an evidence of the parish's regard of the ten years of effort by Bishop McNamara.

A committee of more than 100 men under the leadership of Robert J. Barrett is in charge of the arrangements for the dinner.

The principal speaker will be the Rev. John F. White, an official of the Catholic Charities of New York City, and Wendell Hart, Metropolitan concert tenor, will be the soloist.

at 11 o'clock, with Archbishop Curley singing the mass. The Right Rev. P. C. Gavan, pastor of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart and Spiritual Director of the Washington Section, assisted the Archbishop. The deacon of the mass was Rev. M. J. Riordan of Saint Martin's, with the Rev. John W. Dowling as sub-deacon. The Right Rev. Mgr. Peter L. Ireton preached the morning sermon.

The music for this mass was under the direction of John Dannahy, of the Sulpician Seminary. The choir was composed of 110 voices from the Sulpician Seminary, who sang the music for the mass. Ralph Kelley, also of the Sulpician Seminary, was at the organ.

Following the mass, luncheon was served on the campus of the University. Booths were erected on the campus, and were under the direction of Frank Gunning, chairman of the restaurant committee.

The convention opened at 2:30 o'clock, and was presided over by John F. McCarron, archiocesan president. Reports were made by Caesar L. Aiello, president of the Washington section; George C. Mantz of Baltimore, and president of the Baltimore section; Frank H. Barley, of Cumberland, president of the Western Maryland section, and James M. Dawling, of Bryantown, president of the Southern Maryland section. Francis Anthony McCann, of Baltimore acted as secretary for the convention.

Archbishop Curley praised the work which had been done by the individual Holy Name Societies in all the different sections, and expressed his gratification with progress in the addition of members.

The Holy Name Society yesterday celebrated the 357th year of its organization at the convention. The Rev. Michael Ripple, O. P., of New York, is National director of the association, which numbers more than 3,000,000 members.

There were 25 officers of the Holy Name Society of Philadelphia at the convention, who brought greetings from the members of that section. Women who came with the members made visits to the various religious houses adjacent to the university during the hours of the convention, and were entered at the Sulpician House of Studies. Patrick J. Haltigan was chairman of the reception committee, and Joseph Fitzgerald was chairman of the transportation committee.

Series of Lectures and Open Forum Meetings Brought to Close.

Judge Frederick Haller was elected president of the Washington Secular League at a meeting yesterday afternoon at 1006 E street northwest in bringing to a close a series of educational lectures and open forum meeting which have been conducted each Sunday afternoon since October.

Other officers elected were Thomas Eckloff, John D. Bradley and C. E. Burriss, vice presidents; Dr. A. E. Baden, secretary, and Francis D. Scott, treasurer.

Prof. Edward Wollesensky, a Bureau of Standards scientist, delivered an address on "The Law's Contribution to Crime," contending that the highest function of the Government is the preservation of human rights and liberty, and attacking various laws and legal practices which he holds are invasions of human rights, and which promote instead of suppress crime.

43 Homes Razed by Fire Laid to Church Candles

Przeworsk, Poland, April 27 (A.P.).—Forty-three houses in this little town, near Lwow, were destroyed by fire which was started by candles during services in the synagogue yesterday. Seven hundred persons were left homeless, and were housed in tents.

The historic town hall, dating to the Middle Ages, was saved.

CLOTHES IN HOTEL SPUR MURDER HUNT

Thursday afternoon but asked him to talk the proposition over with him on Friday afternoon. All Thursday the man remained in the lobby of the hotel and did not go out. Later in the afternoon the salesman saw the stranger with a woman at King and Columbus streets. He did not recognize the woman.

Those who conversed with the stranger at the hotel described him as nervous, with a shifty demeanor. They would be able to recognize the stranger if they saw him again, they told police.

Employes of the hotel are sure he spent Wednesday and Thursday night at the place. From early Friday, April 11, he was not seen again. In the bag in which he left were found several shirts, men's underwear and several smaller articles of men's apparel. Police are trying to trace laundry marks and other identification marks on the apparel.

Bag Not Left for Bill.

When the bag was first turned over to the police they were inclined to believe that the man had left his luggage to evade payment of the hotel bill. Statements from the hotel that the man had paid to date dissipated this thought.

Officer Hugh Jones, while in Oak Grove on Saturday, pride into the earlier acquaintanceships of the Baker girl and brought to Mr. Gloth some information which the latter construed as valuable to the case. The nature of the evidence remained unrevealed.

Dr. Thomas F. Baker, the girl's father, was not in Oak Grove when Officer Jones arrived, having been called to Richmond on urgent business. His message to the police was carried by other members of the family.

Queen City Combed Again.

Efforts of the police to locate a suspect in Queen City were continued early yesterday. When the search began one colored man was accosted. Instead of responding he sped way, with police in chase. He eluded them. Police think he may have been wanted for a minor offense and had no connection with the murder.

Many of the operatives in the quest for the slayer believe that the girl was killed by a thief who had been stealing articles from parked automobiles, which may account for the presence, several days after the crime, of stolen articles with the girl's clothing in a catch basin near the murder scene.

Lindbergh Blazes New Mail Route

Flier Beats Schedule Two Hours in Flight to Canal Zone.

Cristobal, Canal Zone, April 27 (A.P.).—With characteristic swiftness Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today blazed a new air mail route across the Caribbean Sea, linking New York and Buenos Aires in a seven-day mail schedule.

Leaving Havana, Cuba, at 5:33 a. m., Eastern standar dtime, today, the flying colonel split the famous Lindbergh Caribbean circle route, striking the Central American mainland at Cape Gracias a Dios, Nicaragua, instead of at Yucatan, on his old route. He landed at France Field here at 4:04 p. m., Eastern standard time, completing his flight of 1,033 miles in 9 hours and 58 minutes. He was not scheduled to arrive until 6 p. m.

The plane brought 215 pounds of mail, destined for various parts of the Southern Americas. Lindberg will not fly beyond this city however. He plans to return to the United States the latter part of the week.

chain and branch banking, trade practices and taxation are among the 14 problems to be considered.

Commenting upon the report submitted by him, Barnes said it suggested a "manifest adjustment of production of goods to current consumption." He added that it indicated also a continuation of "cautious merchandising policies in retail distribution," and disclosed "evidence in our foreign trade of problems of trade disturbances in other countries."

The billion and a half volume of new capital which has poured into corporations during the first three months of the year, the summary said, constitutes a new record save for the same period in 1929.

Building contracts, despite exceeding the billion dollar mark, were shown to be lower than marks set for the first quarter of 1929 and 1928. Expenditures for public works and utilities consthuction increased substantially, however. An additional total of $1,601,000,000 for highway construction also was assured.

Capital expenditures for railroads for the quarter were listed as increasing 40 per cent over the same period in 1929. Capital expenditures in the telephone industry were listed as 30 per cent above last year.

Total production of passenger automobiles and trucks in the United States and Canada was placed at 1,045,000 for the quarter, 500,000 under the record figure for 1929. Sales of used cars were reported the largest on record.

A partial survey of international business conditions, included in the report said:

"Briefly, world business, with a few exceptions, has not been in a prosperous condition during the winter months but appears now to be on the mend, as underlying economic factors show slow but steady improvement."

SUPREME COURT TO HEAR CASES ON RUM BUYERS' GUILT TODAY

product, are guilty of conspiracy with the bootlegger to violate the prohibition law.

The other case presents the direct question of the guilt of the purchaser when illegal transportation is not involved. It comes from Boston, Mass., where the Government was defeated in its effort to have James E. Farrar held guilty of violating the prohibition laws when he purchased illicit liquor from Frank Rotondo.

Last week the court heard arguments on troublesome controversies arising out of prohibition permits, the confiscation of automobiles and its right to seize bottles, barrels, casks and other articles which could be of use to bootleggers for marketing their products.

It has been pointed out that $2,000,000,000 of the purchase price of automobiles is constantly carried by financing and other companies which hold liens on the automobiles while the purchasers are meeting deferred payments. The Government insisted, however, it had the right, when such automobiles are seized, for the unlawful transportation of liquor, to decide whether to confiscate the cars under the internal revenue laws, giving the lien holders no opportunity to redeem them, or under the prohibitio laws, giving the lien holders an opportunity to recover them by showing that the unlawful use had not been authorized.

In five cases involving manufacturers operating under permits to use liquor and alcohol, the Government took the position that it had the right to require such manufacturers to renew the permits annually, and that the permit should not remain in force, as was the old practice, until revoked or suspended for cause.

In its attack on the sale of containers which could be used by bootleggers for marketing the products, the Government emphasized that if it could keep them from obtaining attractive bottles and other containers for their illicit product it would go a long way in reducing the bootleg trade.

Soviet Legation Bomb Unexploded in Plunge

Warsaw, April 27 (A.P.).—Officials investigating a supposed infernal machine found hanging in a chimney in the Soviet legation building here underwent a real test for bravery yesterday when the apparatus fell clattering down the chimney into the basement, it was announced today.

The bomb failed to explode. Clockwork attached to the mechanism had been set for between 8 and 9 p. m., an hour when Soviet legation officials had scheduled a conference. The press here assumed today that the apparatus is a bomb which was planted in the building by either Rusian political exiles or by Soviet opponents of the Stalin regime.

WHAT A WHALE OF A DIFFERENCE JUST A FEW CENTS MAKE

MINISTER CONVICTED IN SHOOTING OF TWO

Found Guilty of Assault on Parishioners; Faces Term in Prison.

29 BALLOTS REQUIRED

Ottawa, Ill., April 27 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The love affair of the Rev. James A. Wilson, of the Methodist Church of Mendota, Ill., with Mrs. Emma Wagner, one of his attractive communicants and a widow, ended today in conviction of attempted murder, which carries a sentence of from one to fourteen years.

This dramatic finish to 30 years of labor in the pulpit is the result of a small town scandal.

The shooting parson's church stood by him solidly during his trial. He is 59, has a wife and two married daughters.

His attentions to Mrs. Wagner had aroused gossip. She repulsed him several times. He wrote a letter to her, confessing his love and reproaching her for coldness.

Victims Have Recovered.

Two of the persons who kept close watch on the preacher were the church janitor, Amos Elliott, and his wife. The latter was a close friend of Mrs. Wagner. Mrs. Elliott obtained possession of the letter and was showing it around to her friends in the church. Elliott had said he would present it to the church board.

Wilson, armed, and accompanied by his wife, went to the janitor's home on January 29 and demanded the letter. Mrs. Elliott gave it to him and he thrust it in his overcoat pocket. Elliott instantly snatched it out of the pocket and refused to give it up. The pastor pulled his gun and shot both the janitor and his wife, Wilhelmina. Elliott recovered from his wound after nine weks. His wife was only slightly hurt.

"The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away," murmured the silvery-haired Methodist pastor and bowed his head when the verdict was read, in striking contrast to scenes during the trial, when he was always surrounded by friends, he was alone when the verdict came. It was so sudden and unexpeited that only a dozen persons were in court.

29 Ballots Needed.

The jury, which retired Saturday evening at 5:30 o'clock, battled furiously until 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. The first ballot found the jurors divided evenly, six to six. Only those believing in the minister's innocence yielded ground until two held out. Then, on the twenty-ninth ballot, the two holdout jurors joined their companions.

When the State's attorney ordered the pastor's arrest, the town of Mendota arose in indignation. Pressure was put upon him to drop the case. The shooting was only a mistake, the loyal church members insisted, and it was outrageous to punish a man who had such a long record of godliness.

Says Mind Went Blank.

This situation led to the remarkable trial which began eight days ago with the courtroom packed with sympathizers for the minister and local feeling at a high pitch against Elliott, who is 68, and his wife, a few years younger, who persisted in the prosecution.

The shooting was admitted. The minister said his mind had suddenly gone blank when he drew the gun. In addition, a long parade of character witnesses testified to his good reputation previous to the shooting. Thus, the defense supported its argument that a preacher of God ought to be excused for the first crime in a long life.

Brickbats & Bouquets

By JAMES HAY, JR.

WHENEVER a noted politician has trouble with his organization, there is always someone with the soul of a worm and the brain of a two-toed sloth to start the gossip that, to revenge himself, he will blow the lid off and tell all the "secrets" of his colaborers.

Last week when it was reported that "friends of Mr. Hoover" had resolved to oust the chairman of the Republican national committee, this same rumor was put into circulation about Mr. Claudius H. Huston.

* * * * *

IT flew from mouth to mouth. It traveled from the rumor mongers to the politicians, to us newspaper writers. It was dressed up in a caressing sensationalism. "Friends of Mr. Huston" were certain that "Claude," if compelled to resign, would turn against all his old chums, confidants and helpers, and, after overwhelming the President of the United States with embarrassment, give the lesser lights such a dose of exposure as would keep them explaining until kingdom come.

Moreover, the gossips had much to say about Mr. Hoover's uneasiness, the Cabinet's anxiety and the Old Guard's panic as a result of the Huston threat—which threat, by the way, had come from here, yon, everywhere but from Mr. Huston himself.

* * * * *

AS a matter of fact, his real friends declared yesterday, the national chairman is incapable of the depravity to which these weird rumors consign him. This thing of blabbing isn't done by anybody who plays the game. And if there is one thing that can be said about the Tennesseean with certitude, emphasis and clarity, it is that he does play the game.

When Mrs. Willebrandt, that gleaming knight who splintered many a lance in the dusty tourney lists of prohibition, was allowed to go her way in peace from the seats of the mighty to the snares and pitfalls of private life the gossips were loud in their assertions that she would write a book which would blow the administration in general, and the prohibition enforcement service in particular, into a thousand invisible, indivisible and irrevocable smithereens.

* * * * *

SHE did write something. In that detail the wisenheimers were correct. But the revealing of "damaging deals" and the blowing off of the lid were conspicuous, interesting and altogether thrilling by their entire absence from the lady's notes, manuscript and final publication.

So it will be with Mr. Huston. Whatever may be his ultimate fate—and right now it looks none too effulgent—he will not loom on the horizon as a tattle-tale, backbiter and peddling violator of confidence.

Men of such profound degradation, of such infinitesimal caliber as the political traitor never get as high as Mr. Huston is today.

MAJ. GEN. GEORGE BARNETT, FORMER MARINE HEAD, DIES

been engaged conspicuously in numerous civic affairs. He served as chairman of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross from 1923 until his illness last December forced his resignation, and since that time had acted as its honorary chairman.

He also was a member of the national committee of Washington Cathedral, among other honors, and held membership in the Army and Navy Club, the Metropolitan Club, the Chevy Chase Country Club, the New York Yacht Club and the University Club in Philadelphia, among other organizations and societies.

Born in Lancaster, Wis., the son of James and Eliza Barnett, he was educated in the high school of Boscobel, Wis., before his appointment to the United States Naval Academy in 1877. He had many classmates who later earned fame, one of whom was his roommate, the late Secretary of War John W. Weeks.

His rise in the Marine Corps was steady. He saw service at virtually every Marine station in the United States, on board various Navy vessels, in Panama, China, Haiti, Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines, and in Samoa, where he formed a close friendship with Robert Louis Stevenson, then living at Apia.

Developed Corps For War.

The "Old Man," as he was affectionately known to many men in the service since his days at Annapolis, at the outbreak of the World War assumed command of a force numbering some 8,000 to 10,000 enlisted men and about 343 officers, scattered in various parts of the world. Within a few months he developed the corps, through selection, elimination and rejection, to about 80,000 men, heightened the esprit de corps and developed the branch to a point of efficiency which made the corps ready for instant active service overseas when the United States entered the World War.

The role of the Marines at Belleau Wood, in the Argonne and elsewhere during the war made history, and as their commanding officer he was awarded the coveted honor of commander of the Legion of Honor from France. Other honors likewise came to him, including the Distinguished Service Medal of the United States, the Cuban Campaign Medal, the Spanish Campaign Medal, the Western Indian Campaign Medal and the Victory Medal.

On June 18, 1920, he resigned his post as major general commandant, bu twas made a permanent major general by act of Congress May 27, 1921, for his notable services in the World War.

Sent Marines Over.

It is interesting to note that when the war broke out, he had promised a regiment of Marines would be sent to France with the first expeditionary force. With this in mind, he assembled 4,000 picked Marines and stood ready to lead them in war service. Two days before the Army transports sailed, he was notified by Secretary of War Newton D. Baker that he regretted that there were not enough available transports and that the Marines would have to wait until "some other time."

"I have promised my men that they would be first to fight," Gen. Barnett responded, "and I don't intend that the slogan of the Marine Corps shall be made ridiculous. My Marines are going over with the first contingent—if they have to swim."

The Army transports put to sea without a Marine bound for the front, but the battleships of the convoy bristled with the forest—green-uniformed men. Gen. Barnett's friends in the Navy, and they were legion, had listened to his pleas.

Served in Pacific Department.

Soon after his resignation as major general commandant, he served as commander of the Pacific Department of the Marine Corps until his retirement, December 9, 1923.

About that time he mad a tour of Japan with other members of the Naval Academy's class of 1881 at the request of the Japanese Government, gvien as a mark of appreciation for the education received at Annapolis by Baron Urui, admiral of the Japanese navy.

He also is survived by a brother, Charles Barnett, of Salt Lake City, Utah, and a stpedaughter, Mrs. Robert Dickey, jr., of Pau, France.

Poetess Who Fled Is Critically Ill

Girl Found Saturday After Leaving Sick-Bed Is Still Unconscious.

Williamsburg, Va., April 27 (A.P.).—Maud Nesselrodt, 21-year-old former school teacher and coed poet, found unconscious yesterday afternoon lying in a clump of bushes in a woods near her home after disappearance early Friday, had not regained consciousness tonight, Dr. D. J. King, attending physician, said. She was suffering from the exposure of her flight from a sick bed, scantily clad in only pajamas, with a bathrobe and coat, and her condition was considered serious by the physician, who said "she is a long way from well."

The discovery of her inert body, blue and numb with cold, yesterday, brought an end to the second hunt for the girl in two years, the first lasting four months before she came home of her own volition, after slipping away from classmates at St. Lawrence University, Canton, N. Y., and eluding police in 20 cities in northern United States and Canada.

Except for her desire to be alone, her relatives said they did not know why the girl should run away, but added there was a "mutual understanding."

Colored Elk Row Argued in Court

Injunction Case Heard by U. S. Judge Groner at Richmond.

A report to the grand exalted roler, J. Finley Wilson, concerning the status of the Grand Lodge of Colored Elks before the courts of Virginia, following a hearing Saturday in Richmond on a temporary restraining order sought by the grand lodge to prevent former grand officers from setting up a separate grand lodge in Virginia, was made yesterday by Perry W. Howard, grand legal advisor, and Judge W. C. Hueston, of Gary, Ind., counsel.

It showed that James C. Carter, former grand treasurer and attorney for the Virginia group, had submitted to Judge Groner, of the Eastern District Court, that the existing grand lodge, with 900 subordinate lodges and 700 subordinate temples, a juvenile organization and various welfare departments, had no right to its ritualistic works, as they had been obtained originally by theft. The judge, it was stated, took this phase of the case under advisement.

The Virginia faction sought to set up a State grand lodge having authority to charter subordinate grand lodges and with grand officers of the same name and title as the existing grand lodge, which action the Grand Lodge of Colored Elks sought to restrain.

nel. In fact, he has expressed approval of the manner in which the warden handled the situation during the fire, pointing out that the prisoners made no effort at an organized break during the confusion.

The warden, in answering those who would suspend him, charged that the State alone was to blame for the disaster because of its failure to relieve crowded conditions in State hospitals and penal institutions, declaring he had called attention repeatedly to the "fire traps" and had appealed in vain to the Legislature for relief.

house and cottages beside the grounds. Portsmouth firemen, aided by Boy Scouts, fought the blaze.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 27 (A.P.).—Pilot Albert Roden, 26, of Saukville, Wis., and his friend, Harry Wagner, 16, of Grafton, Wis., were killed today when Roden's airplane crashed near the Holterhoff Airport here.

Airport officials said it was apparent the crash was caused by a jammed rudder. The pair had been in the air most of the morning and were flying 300 feet above the ground when the airplane suddenly went into a slip and crashed.

The airplane hit the ground nose first and crumpled. Wagner was killed instantly and Roden died five minutes later.

Primary to Name Garber Opponent

Democrats of Virginia District Shun Convention for Choosing Candidate.

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 27.—Democrats of the Seventh Congressional District will select their candidate for the House of Representatives to oppose Representative J. A. Garber, Republican, by a primary and not by a convention, it was announced today by Chairman William E. Carson, of the committee.

There has been considerable agitation in the Seventh District for holding a convention to nominate the congressional candidate, but Mr. Carson took a poll of the Seventh District committee, and the sentiment was overwhelming for the primary method. Many of the convention plan proponents have been advocating former Gov. Harry F. Byrd as the nominee, and the decision to name by primary forestalls any movement to stampede for Byrd in a convention.

Judge John W. Fishburne, of Albemarle County, is the only avowed candidate for the Democratic nomination. The indications are he will be unopposed.

WILLIE T. WHEELER, FORMER JUDGE, DIES

Jurist, 75, Once Occupied Montgomery County Court Bench.

SUCCUMBS IN FAIRLAND

Judge Willie T. Wheeler, 75-year-old former judge of the Montgomery County Orphans Court, died yesterday at the home of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Susie Wheeler, in Fairland, Md. Although ailing for a number of years, it was only until two weeks ago that he was taken with the critical illness which caused his death.

Judge Wheeler was well known throughout the county. He was superintendent of the Montgomery County Building at Silver Spring for several years. Born in Fairland and a resident of that section all his life, he took an active part in all organization and political activities of the county.

Judge Wheeler trained many of the county politicians. Outstanding among his proteges is County Commissioner Lacy Shaw, now in charge of the Silver Spring suburban district.

Democratic leader for the Colesville section and a supporter of the Lee organization since the early nineteen hundreds, the judge was highly respected and loved by all who knew him.

He is survived by two nieces and two nephews. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

GOLD MEDALS GIVEN TO 16 SCOUT HEROES

Winchester Youth Is Among Those Who Saved Lives at Risk of Own.

TRESTLE RESCUE CITED

New York, April 27 (A.P.).—The national court of honor of the Boy Scouts of America today announced awards of the gold honor medal to thirteen scouts for unusual heroism in time of danger and for the saving of lives at great risk of their own. This is the highest award the movement can bestow.

The medals were awarded to Bruce Estey, 19, of South Pasadena, Calif.; Chester Jackson, 14, Harlan, Ky.; Walter Leatham, Alameda, Calif.; Charles Mort, Winchester, Va.; Paul K. Taylor, 13, Highland Park, Mich.; Newton Crouch, Griffin, Ga.; William Vernon Hood, 18, Brownsville, Tenn.; Walter Fichter, 13, West Hazelton, Pa.; Elmer Clarke, 17, Redfield, S. Dak.; John Angle, Shippensburg, Pa.; Joe Thonemann, 15, Middletown, N. Y.; Barnard A. Dawson, 23, Zanesville, Ohio, and James Van Wellden, 14, Nyack, N. Y.

The national court said the rescue of an unidentified child on a railroad trestle as a train was passing, by Scout Fichter, was probably the outstanding case.

Runs Out On Bridge.

Fichter ran out, crossing the track a moment before the train thundered past. He held the child as it went by, the boxes and ladders on the cars missing their heads by inches.

Estey saved Grace Clark from drowning in a heavy sea at Manhattan Beach, Calif., and immediately afterward aided in the rescue of four other persons, also bathing nearby.

Hood was one of a party in a boat which hit a submerged log and overturned during a storm. He saw Mrs. C. B. Laws, one of the party, floundering in the water and pulled her into the then righted boat.

The boat overturned again, and Mrs. Laws slipped off and was drowned. He tried repeatedly to save her, but became exhausted and was himself carried to shore in a rescue boat.

Angle, a swimmer of but two weeks' experience, swam 90 yards and saved Evelyn Grove, 12, despite ehr struggles. Joe Thonemann saved two young brothers who fell in the water at Middletown, N. Y. Dawson, an assistant scoutmaster, rescued a boy from a burning building at Zanesville, Ohio. Clark rescued Wayne Hagman, 19, from drowning. Crouch pulled Miss Willie Childers, 15, out of the water at Griffin, Ga.

Taylor rescued William and Virginia Wilfong, aged 9 and 12, from the Cheat River, near Parsons, W. Va. Van Wellden restored by artificial respiration a 7-year-old boy after he had pulled him from the water. Jackson saved Billy Lay, 11, from drowning when the Cumberland River overflowed part of the town of Harlan, Ky.

DIAL FLASHES

By ROBERT D. HEINL

THE rush hour tonight will end at 5:59 with everybody home in time to hear "Amos 'n' Andy." All dinner hours scheduled for 6 o'clock will be shifted to 6:15 or later.

There is a temporary lull in the further radio appearances of Baby Rose Marie, 5-year-old, until the Children's Society in New York decides what her bedtime ought to be.

Her father, Frank Mazetta, 36 years old, a salesman, was haled into court last week on a charge of having allowed her to sing at a beefsteak supper at midnight, a violation of the law.

A FALL will be taken out of the old-fashioned prejudices against commercially canned foods by Henry W. Phelps, the aggressive president of the American Can Co., this morning. (WRC—10:45 a. m.) Formerly it was the custom to blame canned foods for almost any kind of an illness.

However, for a number of years, Mr. Phelps, Frank E. Gorrell and the National Canners Association have quietly been investigating such charges with amazing results.

Working with health officials, they have found instances where food products have been held responsible in which the trouble was really caused by a sunstroke or even a broken leg.

In the West, a woman was supposed to have died from eating canned foods—a charge which in the old days would have gone unchallenged—but an N. C. A. investigation revealed the startling fact that she had been murdered.

Secretary Wilbur will tell how easy it is to buy a house when he inaugurates "Better Homes" week today (WMAL—4 p. m); Parnassus Trio will play during the Hostess hour (WMAL—3 p. m.), and tonight there will be the premier of "The Sign of the Shell" (WRC—9:30 p. m.).

CREDITED with being one of those first to interest President Hoover in child health welfare, Dr. John Foote, nationally known children's specialist and president of the District Medical Society, will speak in the child health program tomorrow (WRC—5:40 p. m.).

Washingtonians will be urged by Joseph D. Kaufman, "Radio Joe," Wednesday night (WMAL—7 p. m.), to "get into step with the rest of the country" and observe daylight saving time.

We wonder in that connection if Mr. Kaufman remembers a number of years ago when the District tried to get into step by having daylight saving time, but didn't move the hands of the clock forward.

That was when we got after our cook for turning up an hour late. The next morning not being able to figure the thing out, she arrived at 5 a. m. and was mistaken for a burglar.

HAS Damrosch been muzzled? And if he has will there be a flareback from listeners as there was several years ago when at the height of his radio popularity they tried to apply the gag to Roxy?

Mr. Damrosch said Saturday night the time "had probably" come when it would not be necessary for him to describe the musical numbers in such detail. The veteran conductor explained that his talks had not been intended so much to be educational as inspirational, and to help the audience to get into a mood to better enjoy the music.

During the rest of the hour Mr. Damrosch simply announced the name of the piece and the composer.

Doubtless many listeners thought the newspapers were in error in announcing that "The Captain of the Guard" would be broadcast Saturday night, when instead the "Song of the Flame" was sung.

The fact is the National Broadcasting Co. press bulletins from New York, upon which the newspapers must depend, and usually accurate, advised that the captain would be with us. No subsequent correction was received nor was there any explanation over the radio why the change was made.

UNIVERSAL wireless announced yesterday that it does not use the so-called "feed back" principle of a patent recently the subject of an infringement suit. Consequently it will carry on its business without being affected.

Universal, which is establishing telegraphic communication between cities without using wires or poles, expects to add 36 new stations in 1930.

Nobile Giacomo de Martino, the Italian Ambassador, has conveyed to Col. E. Alexander Powell, of Chevy Chase, Mussolini's thanks for Col. Powell's recent radio narrative over Columbia of the campaign on the Carso Plateau, considered the epic of Italy's part in the World War.

Dare INTERPRETS the MODE

There's something so cool and refreshing in a light green crepe dress for summer, something so smart about this particular ones. (Courtesy of Joseph Paquin, Paris.)

Paris, April 27.

THERE isn't any doubt that styles have taken what, to any but us fashion "crickets" who are in the know, a very decided turn. Almost five years now I myself have wailed at the lack of change—nothing new in silhouette or colors—simply little indications here and there that a dress might be well, possibly no older than last season. This year, however, everything is very obviously not last season's.

It is not easy to grasp the ins and outs of the new mode, to know what is really in established favor and what is just temporarily smart. So many fashion writers instead of faithfully reporting on the mode, report only on what they like and what suits their tastes—a thing that I try very hard not to do ever. So do you know what we're going to do? Run a series, which you're going to watch for and cut out every day, of what is the accepted thing in every single phase of the elegant woman's wardrobe. And just to start, let me tell you how to divide the mode—be sure to cut this out!

Sportswear—For the beach, for tennis, for golf, for summer resorts, for riding, for motoring, for yatching.

Morning wear—Street wear for town, out of town wear.

Early afternoon wear—For town and luncheons, for business, for out of town wear.

Dressy afternoon wear—For tea dansants, matinees, bridge in town, for the country club.

Informal evening wear—For in town and out of town.

Semiformal evening wear—For town and country resorts.

Formal evening wear—For town.

Now watch for the real lowdown on colors, materials, straight lengths and silhouettes and, oh, just everything in each one of these wardrobe classifications.

* * * *

Regardless of whether it is the color note of the season or not, I'm always smitten with green for spring. There was a light green crepe dress, ever so simple and practical, but withal ever so chic, at Joseph Paquin's, and I just had to sketch it for you. Couldn't you take a couple of spring promenades with that?

Suede bags for afternoon wear are richly smart, and when they have a bar of amber and strass, or mayhap a crystal and strass knob, for fastening, well, they are their loveliest and most expensive selves.

Don't be a donkey! If you haven't a mule—the adorable high heeled, square toed boudoir variety with lace incrustation or pearls, don't price them, sigh deeply and give up in despair! What do you think Dare stays awake nights for, if it isn't to think up how to make that will really help you to have all the things you want? She even figured how you could make them out of leftover evening slippers and you only have to send her a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post.

* * * *

And Dare also offers her weekly fashion letter that appears each Sunday in The Washington Post.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS.
(Bureau of Home Economics.)

Vegetables are important but often a neglected part of a child's diet. It is well to serve them at least once a day, as they help to keep the bowels in good condition. Several of the ways to accustom a child to unfamiliar vegetables have been suggested here, by using them to flavor stews and soups. If gravy is used it should not be too fat nor with scorched fat.

Young children may be given young and tender parts of celery and lettuce, a satisfactory way being in the form of sandwiches. They should be slightly salted and the celery chopped in small pieces.

All vegetables require careful cleaning, whether cooked or raw.

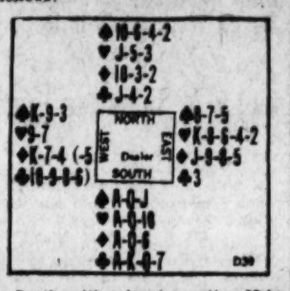
Steaming, boiling and baking are good ways to prepare vegetables for children. In general, vegetables should be cooked in as small amounts of water as possible.

Vegetables should be served either quite simply or with a little milk, cream or butter to improve or vary the flavor. Oil may be served on greens instead of butter. For small children, greens should be finely chopped. Raw radishes and cucumbers should not be given to small children.

WORK ON BRIDGE

MISPLAYED HANDS I HAVE MET.

In a hand played in Contract Bridge, the cards were distributed as follows:



South, with a hand counting 28 by the No Trump valuation generally applied, started with a bid of four No Trumps; 27 with two probable stoppers in every suit would have been sufficient to justify this bid. Had the hand been played at Auction, South would have bid one No Trump; in either game South's bid would be followed by three passes.

In the play, West led his fourth best club. The declarer, desiring to lead from dummy and noting that four club tricks were assured, played the Jack and then, with three suits in which he desired to finesse, two of six cards and one of seven, selected the longest and led a Spade from dummy. West won with his King and as continuing the Clubs was harmless although hopeless, and any other lead might be just what the Declarer desired. He led a second Club, South won and led his two remaining Spades; his next effort was the Ace and Queen of Hearts. But East refused to take the Queen, realizing that it would give dummy an entry to cash the thirteenth Spade. Winning his second Heart established that suit against him, so Declarer then cashed his quick tricks, and in the end lost two Diamonds, one Heart and the Spade already won by the enemy. This left him with only three-odd, so the slam-suggesting four-bid lost the game.

Declarer berated the system which calls for a four-bid with his holding; but he should have criticized his own play.

THE CORRECT PLAY.

Declarer should have won the first trick in closed hand so as to keep a Club entry in dummy until it was needed to cash a Spade. He then should have led his Ace and Queen of Spade, and if West did not win the Queen, should have continued with the Jack. But West would have played his King on the Queen, and led another Club which South should have won and led his two remaining Spades; his next effort was the Ace and Queen of Hearts. But East refused to take the Queen, realizing that it would give dummy an entry to cash the thirteenth Spade. Winning his second Heart established that suit against him, so Declarer then cashed his quick tricks, and in the end lost two Diamonds, one Heart and the Spade already won by the enemy. This left him with only three-odd, so the slam-suggesting four-bid lost the game.

Declarer berated the system which calls for a four-bid with his holding; but he should have criticized his own play.

THE CORRECT PLAY.

Declarer should have won the first trick in closed hand so as to keep a Club entry in dummy until it was needed to cash a Spade. He then should have led his Ace and Queen of Spade, and if West did not win the Queen, should have continued with the Jack. But West would have played his King on the Queen, and led another Club which South should have won and led his Jack of Spades. Then dummy should have been put in with a Club to cash his thirteenth Spade, on which South should have discarded his small Diamond. After that dummy should have led the Jack of Hearts, closed hand playing the Ten if East did not cover. Whether East covered or not, Declarer would make five-odd.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"TAURUS."

IF April 28 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this day are from 6:30 a. m. to 8 a. m., from noon to 1:30 p. m. and from 6 p. m. to 8 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 a. m. to 10:30 a. m. and from 4 p. m. to 5:30 p. m.

Fate is prophesied to force an important change, which will affect, not only your life, but those who belong to the inner circle of your associates. No tears—no troubles augured. Good time for psychic research.

The child born on this April 28 will have a tendency to become melancholy if things do not go just right. It will be hypersensitive, and auspicious of others. It will have considerable patience in any work in which it takes an interest.

Indecision is the bane of your existence. Your abilities are thrown away, opportunities are lost, and prospects blighted, because of the fatal defect of not being able to make up your mind. To know what you want and to set about it when you want it, is a law of achievement and success. You have poor faith in yourself and in your own judgment, even after weighing up the pros and cons of a problem, you keep looking back. You have poor control of your imagination and it is allowed to run riot. Stop holding post-mortems over your successes and failures.

You are not lacking in ambition, and there's no one more willing to work hard for the prizes in life than you are. You are proud, refined and cultured, and you resent having to take a mediocre station in any phase of life. You dislike anything labeled "cheap." You are interested in worth while things and worth-while people. You may well be proud of your coterie of friends—they appreciate you at your real value. You are a good judge of other people's characters, and you are seldom let down in this respect. You are extremely loyal, very unselfish, affectionate, artistic and reserved. You were meant to be the driver, and not a piece of the engine—take your proper place and keep it!

Successful people born April 28:

James Monroe, fifth President of United States.

Robert Bonner, founder of New York Ledger.

Palmer Cox, artist and author, "the Brownie-man."

Frank Hatton, journalist.

Silas S. Packard, founder of Packard Business College, New York.

Bryant Washburn, actor.

Woman Dies in Poverty; Claimed Kin to Emerson

Spokane, Wash., April 27—(A.P.)—Mrs. Pauline Derby, 74, who claimed Ralph Waldo Emerson was her grand-uncle, died in poverty here yesterday. She will be buried in a pauper's grave, county officials said.

Mrs. Derby, acquaintances said, used to tell of being rocked to sleep by Emerson. Her husband was a mining engineer and upon his death many years ago her small fortune was exhausted and she spent her last days as a ward of the county.

The Goofus Nink

The Goofus Nink has learned to play
The piccolo, I've heard them say.
The tune he plays is "Sweet and Low"
He keeps time tapping with his toe.
While his time is good his notes are flat
I've wondered what's the cause of that?
Perhaps it is a hidden wish

BRIAND SEEKS UNION OF EUROPE INDUSTRY

Questionnaire Will Be Sent Powers on Continent by Foreign Minister.

HIS POLICY IS EXPLAINED

Paris, April 27 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Within a short time Foreign Minister Aristide Briand will address to 26 European states a questionnaire dealing with the possibility of forming a European federation. This questionnaire was prepared by M. Briand and collaborators, during the final weeks of the London Naval Conference, in several different drafts all of which are now before Premier Andred Tardieu. One will be selected to be issued.

The French foreign minister's purpose is far-reaching. He does not expect anything immediately resembling a United States of Europe nor another organization similar in character to the League of Nations. His primary object is a union of economic interests for the purpose of lowering tariff walls and eventually reparation of industries.

M. Briand, according to information now available, has no intention of setting up an economic entity as against the United States; but it is within his ideas to establish a united front which may result in the same thing.

Second Half of Task.

This is the second half of the task which M. Briand set himself when France received an invitation to the five-power naval parley last fall. Believing that France was faced with the serious risk of an Anglo-American naval agreement he prepared a program which, with few changes, he has pursued so far. Following an analysis of M. Briand's activities, which he regards as directed principally toward America, a high personage here said to the New York World News Service correspondent:

"When Briand went to London he saw it was necessary from the French viewpoint to correct American ideas as to Great Britain's actual position in the world.

"To prove this in a way to make an impression upon Americans, he made Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald tell the Americans repeatedly during the last weeks of the conference and in many ways how great Britain is bound to the continent. In forcing the security discussion he made Great Britain state publicly—in the presence of Americans the minimum of what she considers her obligations under the League of Nations covenant and the Locarno treaties and from this minimum alone it is evident that England is no longer what she was before the World War—the independent arbiter of European affairs.

Bound to Fate of Europe.

"Great Britain is bound to the fate of Europe and can not escape it. By forcing this discussion Briand not only pulled Great Britain down toward French rank as a power, but showed to the United States that the place of arbiter is now open, since Great Britain is no longer in a position to occupy it, and that for America to tie itself up tightly with England is thus unnecessary.

"With this situation created for the American mind in London by Briand, he is now taking the lead to show America that while it is now in the position as arbiter of world affairs, which England used to occupy, it will not be able in future to wield the same power England had, as in a changing world based on economic interests.

"European states in future won't permit themselves to be played one against another as Great Britain was able to do in the days which are expressed by the British conception of the two-power standard."

Baseball and the turf mixed yesterday and the day turned out to be one of profit for baseball players. It was like this—Clarke Griffith, manager of the New York Americans, had a horse named after him. The horse was entered in the sixth race at Jamaica, all the ball players pooled their money and gave it to Clark Griffith, who in turn put it on Clarke Griffith, who romped home an easy winner at the odds of three to one.

Jersey City

a city of national products

ALTHOUGH Jersey City is chiefly known as the world's greatest railroad terminal city, with shipping next in importance, it has not put all its "eggs in one basket".

The Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co. manufactures more soap, perfume and toilet articles than are produced in any other centre.

There are more tons of telephone directories printed by the Jersey City Printing Co. than by all other printers combined; phone books for almost the entire East are manufactured here.

The American Type Founders Co. manufactures more type than any other three foundries in the world.

The Durham Duplex Razor Co. and Wade & Butcher Co. (coordinated), produce the finest steel cutlery in the world.

Mueller's Macaroni is manufactured in Jersey City.

Jenkins Television Corporation, manufacturers of television receivers, operates from Jersey City THE FIRST commercial broadcasting station in the United States.

Clarence Chamberlin (head of Crescent Aircraft Corporation), first flier to carry passenger across ocean, now building one of largest airports in world for land and seaplanes; and has factory already in operation.

The Continental Can Co., with large modern plant; and a colossal new factory of the American Can Company, make Jersey City a leading producer of tin cans and metal containers for the nation's modern merchandising.

The Joseph Dixon Crucible Co., manufacturers of lead pencils and graphite products, is one of the city's oldest industries.

Besides the American Can, other important new industries are: Bond Electric Corporation, manufacturers of flashlights, batteries and radio tubes; Lambert Pharmacal, Listerine and Listerine tooth paste; Lightolier Company, manufacturers of electric lighting fixtures and lamps.

In these and 700 other manufactories, large and small, are produced over 5,000 different articles of merchandise.

There are reasons for Jersey City's industrial strength.

There are reasons for Jersey City's growth in population; chiefly its Heights residential sections, considerably removed from industrial zones; also rapid transit to New York.

BUSY WEEK AHEAD FOR SENATE, HOUSE

Parker Nomination, Tariff, Unemployment Slated for Congress Action.

WAGNER BILL INCLUDED

(Associated Press.)

Congress yesterday contemplated one of its busiest weeks of the session as preparations went forward to consider unemployment, the Parker nomination, and the tariff, and programs for two or three far-reaching senatorial investigations.

With immigration restriction legislation regarded as sidetracked until next December, the Senate will take Federal Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina, to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court, and a bitter contest in sight.

Before reaching the second Hoover appointment to the highest tribunal, initiate debate will be started on the Wagner bill to authorize a $150,000,000 long-range program to remedy unemployment. This has been made the Senate's unfinished business.

With disposition of this measure, Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, its author, plans to seek action on his bills providing for the collection of accurate statistics on unemployment and for a Federal employment agency to work in cooperation with the States.

Miscellaneous measures will take up the time of the House until Thursday, when the tariff bill conference report is scheduled for consideration.

Another conference on the tariff is expected before the Senate acts, and Chairman Smoot, of the finance committee, expressed the opinion yesterday that it would be at least June 1 before the bill could be made ready for action by the President.

Meanwhile, special committees appointed by the Senate to inquire into expenditures of senatorial candidates and Federal lesses of post-office buildings have been called to meet early in the week to map out programs of procedure.

On the Rules of Traffic
By WILLIAM ULLMAN

It is impossible to believe that the amber light is ignorantly abused. The law seems too simple for that.

In Washington, the amber is an intersection clearing signal; nothing more. When it shows after the green light, all moving traffic must stop unless it can clear the intersection before the red flashes. In the meantime, all traffic waiting on the cross street is required to remain standing until the amber changes to green.

Example: A driver is within 60 feet of an intersection when the amber light flashes in front of him. He drives on but fails to clear the intersection before the red shows. He has violated the regulations. In the meantime another driver on the cross street enters the intersection while the amber still is showing. He also has violated the regulations. Both are subject to arrest.

Germany of today, a reborn country, extends a cheerful invitation to America to exchange cultural and material achievements and ideas. She offers the romantic past in historic relics, castles, operas, walled cities, the Oberammergau Passion Play; and the flashing present in every diversion of modern life and art.—No visé charge, of course, to enter Germany. JUDGE PARKER'S CASE.

Judge John J. Parker has written a letter to Senator Overman stating his position with respect to the protests made against his appointment to the United States Supreme Court. This letter appears elsewhere in this issue of The Post, and should be read by the public as well as by senators.

With directness and dignity, Judge Parker sets forth the facts concerning the Red Jacket case. No fair-minded man can read his letter without reaching the conclusion that the protest of labor organizations against his action in that case is without merit. He followed the law as laid down by the Supreme Court. He did not and could not originate a decision prejudicial to labor in connection with the so-called "yellow dog" contract, since the Supreme Court had already directly upheld that form of contract in two cases. The fact that a subcommittee of the Senate judiciary committee is now formulating a bill to outlaw the "yellow dog" form of contract is proof that it is law. If Judge Parker is unfit because he followed the decisions of the Supreme Court, every Federal judge in the United States is unfit to administer justice.

With regard to his alleged prejudice against the colored race, Judge Parker again speaks with frankness and dignity. He calls attention to his judicial decisions in meeting his obligation to give full scope and effect to the Constitution and the laws guaranteeing the rights of colored people. Judge Parker refers to the charge that during a political campaign ten years ago he made statements indicating hostility to the colored race. He says

> My effort then was to answer those who were seeking to inject the race issue into the campaign under a charge that the Republican party of North Carolina intended to organize the colored people and restore the conditions of the reconstruction era. I knew the baneful effect of such a campaign and sought to avoid it. For years the best men of both races in the State had been seeking to create friendly sentiments and peaceful relations between the races; and I did not want their efforts to be sacrificed, or the party, whose nominee I was, to be embarrassed, by the raising of a false issue of this character. * * *
> While I made it clear that my party was not seeking to organize the colored people of the State as a class, I at no time advocated denying them the right to participate in the election in cases where they were qualified to do so, nor did I advocate denying them any other of their rights under the Constitution and laws of the United States. Any charge or intimation that I appealed to race prejudice is most unjust. * * * I have no prejudice whatever against the colored people and no disposition to deny them any of their rights or privileges under the Constitution and the laws.

Judge Parker's record as a member of the Circuit Court of Appeals supports his statement that he has no prejudice against the colored race and no disposition to discriminate against them as a judge.

The preeminent ability and high character of Judge Parker qualify him for the Supreme Court. The allegations that he is prejudiced against labor and the colored people are utterly groundless and false.

There remains in opposition to Judge Parker an element in the Senate that hopes to terrorize the Supreme Court and to strip it of some of the judicial power conferred upon it by the Constitution. Judge Parker is the visible target against which this radical element aims its poisoned arrows, but the real target is the Nation's judiciary. The established liberties of the people as safeguarded by the courts of justice will be destroyed if radicalism can substitute the vagaries of Senate blocs for the impartial interpretation of the Constitution by the supreme tribunal. Evidently it makes no difference whether Judge Parker or another person is nominated; the campaign for destruction of the judicial power, under the guise of "liberalizing" the Supreme Court, will go on.

The vote on Chief Justice Hughes revealed that two-thirds of the Senate stood firmly for the integrity of the Federal judiciary. It would be a sorry spectacle if this majority should now disappear under the whip and spur of radical propaganda operating through labor and racial organizations. Some senators are up for reelection, and are acutely sensitive to demands that seem to be supported by large classes of voters. Organized labor has only to study the record in Judge Parker's case to find in him an able, impartial, and honest judge. Labor can not honestly ask for any other kind of judge. The colored organizations that have protested against Judge Parker would not demand his rejection if they were aware of the fact that he has proved, both on and off the bench, that he cherishes friendly relations between the races and will not deal unjustly with the colored race. Senators who apprehend wholesale reprisals from labor and the colored vote if they should support Judge Parker's nomination are mistaking a trumped-up propaganda of radicalism for a valid grievance.

The conscientious and patriotic course for senators to pursue in this case is to vote to place an able and honest judge, John J. Parker, upon the Supreme Court bench.

MAJ. GEN. GEORGE BARNETT.

After a long and painful illness, Maj. Gen. George Barnett, former commandant of the United States Marine Corps, died in Washington yesterday.

The history of the Marine Corps, extending from the early years of the Republic, was made doubly illustrious during the World War, largely as a result of the energy and foresight of Gen. Barnett. His command covered the most crucial period, when the Marine Corps was called upon to test its preparedness in battles of magnitude. It is the tradition of the corps that it is always ready, but the extraordinary demands upon it could not have been met if its vigilant commandant and his staff had not devoted extra care in anticipation of the great emergency. Thanks to Gen. Barnett, the Marine Corps was enabled to perform the deeds in France which added to the imperishable glory of American arms.

Gen. Barnett had seen varied service before the World War—in the West Indies, South America, and the Orient. He went through all the grades from cadet midshipman to major general, and spent many years at sea and on naval stations abroad. This experience qualified him for the duties that fell upon him in organizing the expedition to France and in the dispositions of the Marine forces in that country.

In private and social life a delightful companion, in his official service a commander who repeatedly received the warm commendations of the Presidents under whom he served, Gen. Barnett leaves his name inscribed in the county's roll of honor and in the hearts of innumerable friends.

HELPS TO AVIATION.

The McNary-Parker bill, recently introduced, would place aircraft intended for international operation in the same category, so far as Government aid is concerned, as surface vessels. The bill would stand in relation to aircraft as the Jones-White bill stands in relation to surface vessels. The Watres bill, passed by both houses last week, makes it possible for the Government to treat with the operators of aircraft engaged in interstate traffic as it treats with the railroads. It places airmail on a space-mileage basis in place of the old poundage basis.

These two bills, one needing only the President's signature to become law and the other regarded as sure of enactment, promise to elevate the United States to a position of leadership among the nations in air commerce. The McNary-Parker bill offers a solution of the problem: How are transatlantic plane and dirigible lines to be financed? The Watres bill will enable airplane operators to establish themselves on a sound financial foundation. Under the prevailing system the plane operator is compensated for carrying mail according to its weight. Some days his planes fly empty, or practically so, and he receives no compensation from the Government. When provisions of the Watres bill become effective, compensation will be paid for each and every flight.

The next few years will witness the proving of the plane and dirigible.

JAMES MONROE.

In a small brick house in Westmoreland County, known as the Northern Neck of Virginia, one hundred and seventy-two years ago today, James Monroe was born. If the surroundings were primitive they certainly were picturesque. An old-fashioned boxwood walk led to the house, and a mulberry tree stretching out its branches hither and thither reached down to the eaves of the unpretentious home.

The interior of this colonial home was exceedingly simple. The rafters and beams of the house showed plainly the unskilled craftmanship of the period. It is well to remember that at this date, 1758, Westmoreland County was a primeval forest, and the Indian was a terrible menace.

The active career of James Monroe began at the early age of 18. In 1776 he left William and Mary College to join the Continental Army at Harlem, N. Y. His military career was unusual. Before he was 21 he became a lieutenant colonel. Honors followed thick and fast, and at the age of 25 he was a member of the Continental Congress in New York. He was elected from the State of Virginia to the United States Senate in 1790, when he was just 32. Four years later Monroe was sent by President Washington as second Minister to France, and he arrived in that country in the midst of the French revolution. Returning to his country in 1796 he was elected Governor of Virginia, and at different periods held the office four times. President Jefferson sent him the second time as Minister to France, and it was while abroad he became Minister to England and Spain. President Madison selected Monroe for Secretary of State, and three years later, in 1812, he served both as Secretary of State and Secretary of War in this same Cabinet.

In 1817 Monroe was elected President, and he had the distinction when elected for his second term to be the only President except Washington to be elected practically unanimously. He died in 1832 at the house of his daughter, Mrs. Samuel L. Gouverneur, in New York City, and for 30 years his body rested in a Gouverneur vault in Marble Cemetery in that city. But Virginia was unwilling to have her illustrious son's remains in any soil except that of his native State, and in 1858 his body was carried "back to old Virginia," where it rests in Hollywood Cemetery, Richmond. Towering over his grave is a monument erected by his State in grateful recognition of his long and faithful services.

Another question for debate is whether women who are past 18 or bootleggers are most reticent when the census taker calls.

8-INCH VS. 6-INCH CRUISERS

By Commander HOLLOWAY H. FROST, U. S. N.

Advocates of 6-inch cruisers admit the desirability of having fifteen 8-inch cruisers. Similarly, advocates of 8-inch cruisers admit that we can use to advantage fifteen 6-inch cruisers. These 30 vessels will displace about 258,000 tons. Assuming that we desire parity with Great Britain at 339,000 tons, we still have 81,000 tons remaining. A preponderant naval opinion has desired that this entire tonnage be devoted to 8-inch cruisers. This would raise our total to 23, which is exactly the number now built, building or authorized by law. On the other hand, the London treaty will not permit any of this 81,000 tons to be used for 8-inch cruisers, unless their building is delayed and the total is reduced by 15,000 tons through the application of the "yardstick." Thus the point at issue is: Has our national security been seriously endangered by substituting eleven 7,400-ton 6-inch cruisers for eight 10,000-ton 8-inch cruisers?

As a basis for discussion take the following characteristics of the two types:

	8-inch	6-inch
Tonnage	10,000	7,400
Speed	32 knots	32 knots
Endurance	13,000 miles	11,000 miles
Battery	Nine 8-inch	Nine 6-inch
Torpedo Tubes	Six	Twelve
Planes	Four	Two
Armor	2-3 inches	2-3 inches

Let us apply these two types in turn to the three primary missions of cruisers: First, to gain information and deny it to the enemy. Second, to fight in the fleet action. Third, to attack and defend oversea trade.

To gain information of the enemy and deny him information of our dispositions and movements cruisers are advanced ahead of the fleet's main body in scouting lines or screens. These may be compared with the interference provided in football to conceal the direction of the plan and clear a path for the man carrying the ball. Now, the ocean is large and it is essential that a given tonnage of cruisers should cover the largest possible area. The first object is to insure contact with the scouting lines or screens of the hostile fleet. For all usual scouting operations both cruisers will have ample endurance. As they have equal speeds, it follows that a 6-inch cruiser can cover as large an area as an 8-inch cruiser. It can maintain its station as accurately and report contacts as quickly. In this first essential of scouting, therefore, 11 small cruisers are much better than 8 of the larger type.

When contacts are made with hostile screens or scouting lines, the next essential is to locate the hostile main body and prevent the enemy scouts from obtaining similar information of ours. This mission can be accomplished in three ways: First, by cruisers; second, by aircraft, and third, by submarines. If the enemy vessel encountered by our cruiser be a battle cruiser, our ship in any case must run before it. If it be a destroyer, the 6-inch cruiser will be able to drive it back rather more effectively. If it be a submarine, the 6-inch cruiser offers a smaller target to its torpedoes. Now, finally, assume a contact between a 6-inch and an 8-inch cruiser. In good visibility there is no question that the 8-inch ship can drive back the 6-inch vessel. Both guns have sufficient range for any fight between single ships. The armor of each is about equal. The 8-inch ship offers the larger target, but this is more than counterbalanced by the greater penetrating effect of its shells. It can also deliver about 9,200 pounds of metal per minute against 5,800—assuming four shots per minute for 8-inch and six for 6-inch. But against this its supply of ammunition must be much more limited. Still, everything considered, in good visibility the 8-inch cruiser could defeat or drive back the smaller craft. However, in darkness or low visibility, the 6-inch cruiser could slip past the larger craft or have a good chance of beating her with point-blank gun and torpedo fire. Of, course, the driving in of the hostile screen is only the first step toward locating the hostile main body. A single cruiser endeavoring to penetrate into the enemy's position will quickly run into supports in the form of battle or 8-inch cruisers. It will certainly be attacked heavily by aircraft and possibly by submarines. It is improbable that cruisers—either 8-inch or 6-inch—will be able to locate the hostile main body if it is properly screened.

An easier and more economical method of accomplishing this mission is to fly over or dive under the hostile screens. Thus, when a scouting line begins to make contacts, the cruisers will catapult off their planes to search out a wide band 150 miles ahead. The large cruiser will have four planes for such work against two for the small cruiser. If it uses two fighting planes to attack the scouting planes of the smaller cruiser and two scouting planes to scout ahead, the chances are that it will succeed in gaining valuable information and denying it to the enemy. Thus the 8-inch cruiser has a rather decided advantage. However, should the 6-inch cruiser on the scouting line report the failure of its aircraft, scouting operations for the enemy main body would then be commenced by the planes of other cruisers in the vicinity and of aircraft carriers purposely stationed close behind the scouting line for that specific purpose. A group of fleet submarines will usually be ready to push through the enemy screens as disclosed by cruiser contacts. With the assistance of reports from aircraft, these submarines will endeavor to locate the hostile main body and keep in constant touch with it, thereafter making frequent reports of its course, speed and position to the commander in chief.

As regards 8-inch and 6-inch cruisers in scouting operations we conclude: First, the greater number of 6-inch cruisers permits them to cover a greater area. Second, 8-inch cruisers individually are more effective in pushing back hostile scouting lines, in driving through to gain further information, and in the use of planes to gain or deny such information. Third, given tonnage of 8-inch cruisers is somewhat more effective than an equal tonnage of 6-inch cruisers, but this superiority does not amount to more than 5 or, at most, 10 per cent.

A comparison of these two types of cruisers in a fleet action and in trade warfare will be made in a later article.

LIFE'S BOUNDARIES.

God grant me this: That I may seek
No more from life than life can give,
And be content, from week to week,
Within its boundaries to live.

Grant me to see with open eyes
That men, no matter where they roam,
Can find no sweeter joys to prize
Than those which make the happy home.

The children romping round the door,
The faith of friends, the sports we play—
These are the joys men struggle for,
Whatever scoffing cynics say.

The good life wins no more than these,
Though pleasure's lure seems wondrous fair.
Who vaults these lowly boundaries
Will find disaster and despair.

Since only pleasure no man knows,
And care and duty must be met,
Let me not blindly rush with those
Who strive some curious joy to get.

Let me with friends and neighbors find
My happiness the while I live,
And not with a disgruntled mind
Ask more from life than life can give.

If You Would Preserve an Appetite for Cake, Eat an Occasional Pickle.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THE mating instinct shared by men and women is nothing more nor less than the instinct that prompts wild creatures to mate.

The admiration, tenderness and unselfish devotion that unite to form the quality called love apparently dignify the courtship and mating of birds and beasts.

If marriage offered no greater reward, and depended wholly on bonds so fragile, not one in ten would afford enduring happiness.

But there is a sublime friendship and comradeship, cemented by the years, that rewards congenial mates who are worthy, and it harmonizes and blends and welds them until they are so nearly one that neither can endure life without the other.

That is the reward and the condition of true marriage, and to win and establish it is the only hope of those who cast their lots together.

There is no such comradeship before marriage, unless the courtship has been long.

It must develop, by chance or design, during those first months of ecstasy when romance seems the whole of life, and be ready to justify and cement the union when romance gives way to hard reality.

There is no other way to make marriage successful.

Thus it becomes the first duty and the highest hope of united lovers to do those things that establish comradeship and to leave undone the things that hinder it.

How shall they know what to do?

They can learn from their own natures.

It is the nature of men and women to be interested and charmed by unfamiliar things and to be bored by things too often seen.

The plan of nature separates mates at intervals, for the man must be gone in quest of food and the woman must care for her babies at home.

That plan, with or without babies, with or without a true home, is the only plan that offers hope.

There must be separation—during the day, if that is sufficient—for a week or a month if that is necessary.

There must be no satiety—no boredom born of intimate association too long endured—for no love can survive it.

Satiety makes ever mannerism and tone of voice and oft-repeated gesture hateful and unbearable.

There must be separation when boredom threatens, and during each reunion there must be a studied effort to preserve the atmosphere of newness by practicing the manners and courtesies commonly employed to please welcome guests.

It is darkness that makes each sunrise glorious.

And a rose beside your plate makes hash a delicacy.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THE SPRING BRUSH FIRE COMPLEX.

Are you having your daily brush fire? If not, why not? This is the time of year when every good American considers it a civic duty to set fire to the lawn or the lot next door and give the neighborhood a good big scare. It's an old Spanish custom.

* * * *

The urge to go out and start a brush fire is a most peculiar impulse. It seizes every normal person this time of year. Jason P. Citizen gets home from the office a little early, sniffs the spring air and immediately begins to feel funny. He doesn't know quite what it is at first.

* * * *

The initial symptom is extreme uneasiness. He goes out into the back yard and walks around nervously. He feels strange impulses stirring. Ultimately he goes to the cellar or garage and gets a rake. Then he begins to feel feverish. Presently he begins to rake the lawn quite furiously. This gives him no relief. He is puzzled.

* * * *

Now he breaks out in a clammy perspiration. He sees spots before his eyes. He thinks it must be something he ate and is about to go in and take some bicarbonate of soda or something when his nostrils catch an odor of something burning. He looks around and sees a cloud of smoke coming from Joe Spiegel's yard. Presently Joe and his whole family begin beating the flames.

* * * *

Immediately Jason realizes what's wrong with him. He hasn't started a grass fire!

* * * *

He whips out a box of matches and darts about the yard, igniting the grass and fanning the flames with his hat. He feels a little better.

* * * *

Slowly at first the flames spread. The wind seems unfavorable for a good hot fire endangering old Mrs. Doople's house next door. But a breeze springs up and the fire gets pretty smart. It ignites the clothespole, leaps to the picket fence and spreads onto Mrs. Doople's property.

* * * *

Jason feels very good now but not perfect. He will not feel right until the flames reach the Doople cellar door. When they reach to the cellar door it will be time to rush into the kitchen for a broom. The wind gets stiffer. Hooray! The grass fire is now going great guns. Jason dashes in and gets the broom. He starts beating at the flames. Neighbors come rushing from all points of the compass with brooms.

* * * *

Mrs. Doople calls the fire department. Mrs. Doople's house is saved. Jason says he can't understand how the fire got started. It must have been boys. A good time has been had by all.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Colored People of North Carolina Object to Lynching of Judge Parker.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Association for the Advancement of Colored People has accomplished some good for some of our people in the Southwest. North Carolina has helped the association financially. The writer of this article has been active in putting over contributions. The men who have backed Judge Parker are taxpaying citizens and contribute to the general welfare of our people instead of sucking their life blood.

The Senate of the United States should first look southward and note the fact that Maj. Moton, Booker Washington's successor, indorsed him. Dr. S. G. Atkins, the foremost layman of the A. M. E. Zion Church in this country; Dr. James E. Shepard, a prominent layman and past grand master of Masons, backed by thousands of home-owning and thrifty Negroes, indorse Judge John J. Parker because they feel that he will reflect that culture and refinement plus legal attainments necessary for the court of last resort. Many Negroes who are not highbrows of Harlem have no patience with lynching by any people. This is a form of lynching that should meet the condemnation of the United States Senate.

In this hour of economic depression there are many Negroes who are anxious to see the good work of interracial good go forward without disturbing the turbid waters of prejudice and hatred. This camouflage covers the real fight, against the Supreme Court, using the national association as a tool. I don't believe that any member of the Senate will permit this plot to hold. The position of our race has improved, without the assistance of men who care more for their personal advancement than for the masses. C. M. EPPES, Taxpayers Would Object to Government Posters Warning Against Booze—Nobody Wants Saloons.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: The taxpayers of this country would hardly approve of the Government spending their money for the printing and distribution of literature and posters purporting to advertise the alleged evil effects of beverage alcohol, as suggested by one of your correspondents in today's issue of The Post. Nor would the Government be justified in pursuing such a course with regard to one of the amendments to the Constitution when at the same time there are certain other amendments which it is claimed have not been strictly obeyed in certain sections of the country, and as to which violations we bear very little or no complaint.

Nor is the situation at all comparable with such problems as the "foot and mouth disease" and "boll weevil" which are dealt with by the Department of Agriculture. These diseases destroy the very source on which life is dependent. And even if this were not true, there are very few, if any, ardent drys, who would not prefer a drink occasionally to being afflicted with the "foot and mouth disease," if they had to choose between the two.

However, the whole argument of your correspondent is stripped of any merits which it might otherwise have, because of the statement made in the first paragraph of his letter in which it is said that in spite of the faults of the present situation it is preferable to the old regime, with its saloon on every corner. There are no advocates of a modification of the eighteenth amendment, not even the wettest of them, who favor or would tolerate the return of the saloon. For this reason any statement which uses as its argument against modification a comparison of the present situation with the one that prevailed when the saloon was permitted loses its force. A VIRGINIAN.

"Scotsman" Called Down for Bewailing Monetary "Waste" of Easter Egg Rolling.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A correspondent signing himself "Scotsman" in The Post of April 23, informs us that "the American people have some very peculiar ideas of fun."

In passing the White House on egg-rolling day he noticed a great economic crime being committed in that hundreds of children enjoyed themselves by destroying "12,000 eggs worth $350."

I wonder if he heard the thousands of happy peals of childish laughter that enriched the atmosphere as they floated out of the White House lot? How much were they worth? What is the value in cash of a smile on a child's face? Here in America we do not place such values on it.

May I suggest, Sandy, that you visit us again on the next egg-rolling day and that you visit the White House lot; but, take a wee drap o' "spirrits" first. In fact take two or three wee draps and notice the difference—both physically and economically.

Mon, mon, dinna ye ken that "one touch o' nature makes the whole world kin?" AN IRISHMAN.

Why Object to Bumping Off Bootleggers, Asks Mr. Dooley.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by the papers that Mr. Curran, of the Antiprohibition Society, is making a great fuss about the shooting of a thousand bootleggers by the enforcement agents. Inasmuch as every bootlegger is strongly in favor of the eighteenth amendment and votes dry at every opportunity, it seems inconsistent for Mr. Curran to object to their number being reduced. I should think, however, that the Antisaloon League would be much worried by the loss of a thousand dry votes wiped out by the guns of Government men. Perhaps they don't realize it, but the time is coming when a thousand dry votes are going to mean a great deal to the Antisaloon League. MR. DOOLEY.

"IN THE PLAYHOUSE"
by JOHN J. DALY

IN a little while the National Theater Players will have the scene all to themselves. Come Saturday night, Poli's goes out of business.

• • • •

TONIGHT, then, there will be two choices of drama—Katherine Chisholm Cushing's light comedy, "Jerry," at the National, and Walter Hampden playing the title role in a revised version of Sir Bulwer-Lytton's serious play, "Richelieu," at Poli's.

• • • •

'TWAS Arthur Richman, a native playwright with many works to his credit, who dished up this particular acting version of "Richelieu"—a play last seen here in the hands of the late Robert Mantell. Then there were many "asides," following the fashion of the old school and of the original script. Now, these "asides" have been thrust aside—and there are no steamers chunking from Rangoon to Mandalay.

• • • •

ABOUT the middle of the week Mr. Hampden will offer the second play in his present repertoire, "Caponsacchi," based upon Robert Browning's "The Ring and Book." A Washington woman first had the idea of making a play around this literary masterpiece. Miss Rose A. Palmer submitted the MSS. to Walter Hampden who liked the idea and then called in the stage technician, Arthur Goodrich, to take care of certain theatrical needs.

• • • •

ON the day that Poli's gives up the ghost as a theater—Saturday next—Mr. Hampden will step out on the boards in his favorite role, "Hamlet." It was not long ago, on the anniversary of Shakespeare's birth, April 23d, that Charles Edward Russell, the eminent dramatic critic and publicist, stood on the stage at Corcoran Art Gallery and pointed out the vast possibilities offered by what is undoubtedly Shakespeare's most popular character, the Melancholy Dane. "What the role needs most of all," said Mr. Russell, "is an intelligent interpretation." So many actors fail at this work because they rely too much on stage presence and theatricalism. Hampden's "Hamlet" is a studied one in the sense of the man being a student.

• • • •

IN the system in vogue at the National most of Mr. Steve Cochran's high-powered players have opportunity to assert themselves. It is somewhat like the method employed by the Moscow Art Players where the star of one performance automatically becomes an ordinary member of the cast in some other play. Of course, there must be the leads—but the leading lady and leading man do not always have to play the dominant parts. This week Miss Marion Wells, the leading lady, gets a chance to sweep through "Jerry," a play that was once used as a starring vehicle for Miss Billy Burke—the red-haired goddess. As Miss Wells, too, is blessed with titian tresses, everthing about the part, including the costumes, comes ready made for her.

HIGH LIGHTS OF GREAT WORLD WAR

As Related by the Veterans Themselves

Momentous Event

One of the most impressive and historical events which I was privileged to witness while serving at Gen. Pershing's headquarters was the visit of our wartime President, Woodrow Wilson. As this was the first time an American President had left the American shores to visit continental Europe it proved to be of momentous importance and interest to all the allied countries. The President was scheduled to arrive in Chaumont, France, at 9 a. m. on Christmas morning, December 25, 1918. In honor of his proposed visit the town was elaborately decorated with American flags and the tricolor. The headquarters had six groups of allied flags and bunting all around the three huge brick buildings which were occupied by the general and his staff. At about 8:30 a. m. on that morning I left headquarters and proceeded downtown where Wilson was due to arrive.

As I approached the outskirts of the town I was surprised to see all the streets lined with American troops wearing helmets, carrying full packs, overcoats, trench shoes and guns. The soldiers were stationed at a distance of three yards from one another and were acting as a guard of honor to the President. As I got farther downtown the streets were jammed and packed with American and French soldiers and a large throng of the civilian population of the town. I finally managed to get a place about 50 yards away from the Hotel de Ville, where I could get a splendid view of what was taking place.

Brought up on one side of the city hall was a French guard of honor composed of 50 men, including French trumpeters. These men presented a beautiful military spectacle. Facing these soldiers on the other side of the city hall was a large American band of the Forty-second Division and running lengthwise on both sides of the long thoroughfare leading to the city hall and from there to the railroad station extended the guard of honor composed of American troops which had been ordered to headquarters for that occasion.

Guarding the two main streets leading to the city hall were detachments of machine gunners ready for any emergency that might arise to mar the peaceful visit of the President of the United States. At precisely 9:14 a. m. the word was passed along that the President's machine was coming from the station and the order was given to the guard of honor to stand at rigid attention. People were now standing on tops of buildings, in church towers, on electric poles and trees, or any place where they could view the proceedings. Finally the President arrived, stepped out of an army limousine, accompanied by Gen Pershing. He was dressed in a heavy raccoon fur coat and high silk hat and had his usual smile for every one close by. He bowed several times and tipped his hat to the American and allied generals, soldiers and civilian population immediately surrounding him, and then entered the Hotel de Ville, where he was given a grand welcome by the mayor and French civil authorities. About ten minutes later he came out of the hall, entered his machine, followed by approximately 50 Army automobiles, which contained high ranking allied officers and distinguished guests. After he had completed his trip around the French village, President Wilson and his staff proceeded immediately to Langres, about 30 kilometers from Chaumont, where he was due to review a large American division which had recently returned from the front. He was due back at general headquarters at 3:30 p. m. that day to inspect the headquarters. The President returned at that time, but merely circled the huge parade grounds surrounding headquarters, getting a good view thereof, and then immediately proceeded to Paris via express, where he was due with Mrs. Wilson to dine with the President of France that evening. The following day he left Paris for London, England, where he stopped with the King and Queen of England at Buckingham Palace.

Dear Old London

At 9:30 in the morning, November 11, 1918, we who were at naval headquarters in London heard that the armistice had been signed at 5 o'clock. My "superior officer" told me to go out and see the fun, and as I got outside a procession was going by, cheering the U. S. flag. When Admiral Sims came to a window you should have heard them cheer.

A bunch of us formed a constantly growing parade and marched in squad formation to Buckingham Palace, singing "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here." We were admitted to the courtyard by the guards at the gate, and lined up with sixteen bluejackets in front holding a big American flag.

One of the king's military bands played national airs of the allies, Italy's, the Belgian, the Marseillaise, "Star-Spangled Banner" and "God Save the King," while the king—who had come out on a balcony with the queen, Prince of Wales and some lesser lights—stood at salute in his uniform of admiral of the British Royal Navy. The thousands of people who had gathered outside the gates roared their approval. The king made a short speech, but the tumult was deafening and I lost most of it.

There were some wild scenes that night! Cheering, just plain yelling, tooting of horns, dancing in the streets, processions with torches, a little bit of everything that was exciting and hilarious. In spite of a wet, misty rain, everybody was out to celebrate. The buses stopped running because they couldn't get through the crowds, and I had to walk from Victoria to the Strand. There you could scarcely move. The bobbies turned on a few new lights, and every time one came on the crowd would cheer. One man got hold of one of the "Shelter During Raid" signs and smashed it to pieces.

It wasn't possible to use up all the exuberance in one night. On the following evening soldiers and others made a big bonfire in Trafalgar Square and damaged the Nelson monument. They dragged German guns from the Mall and put them in the fire. The police were powerless; finally firemen came and turned their hose on the crowd, but the soldiers captured the hose and turned it on the firemen! The climax was on Saturday night, when the people were as thick as on Monday, and there was a beautiful fireworks exhibition in the square—candles, rockets and a new kind I had never seen, an aeroplane spreading-wings effect, very pretty.

CONVICT SHIP

The Oldest Ship Afloat

Built in India 1790

This Wonderful Vessel Has Made History During Three Centuries

She marked the beginning and the end of England's monstrous penal system.

She has held lurid horror and dreadful iniquities beside which even the terrible stories of the Black Hole of Calcutta and the Spanish Inquisition pale into insignificance.

She is the oldest ship in the world and the only convict ship left afloat of that dreadful "Fleet of Ocean Hells," which sailed the Seven Seas in 1790 A. D.

She is unchanged after all these years, nothing being omitted but her human freight and their suffering from the cruelties and barbarities practiced upon them.

Aboard her are now shown, in their original state, all the airless dungeons and condemned cells, the whipping post, the manacles, the branding irons, the punishment balls, the leaden-tipped cat-o'-nine tails, the coffin bath and the other fiendish inventions of man's brutality to his fellow man.

From keel to topmast, she cries aloud the greatest lesson the world has ever known in the history of human progress.

The Convict Ship "Success" is the Greatest and Most Extraordinary Exhibition That Ever Visited America. It Is a Theme for the Pen of a Dante. When You Walk Her Decks, Grooved with the Chains of Her Miserable Victims, the Past Will Speak to You Its Sad and Mournful Lesson. But You Will Leave Feeling Better Because You Live in a Better Age.

Beauty of line and mechanical excellence

BEAUTY has been built into the graceful flowing lines of the new Ford and there is an appealing charm in its fresh and varied harmony of color. Yet more distinctive even than this beauty of line and color is its alert and sprightly performance.

As days go by you will find that it becomes more and more your favorite car to drive—so responsive, so easy to handle, so safe and comfortable that it puts a new joy in motoring.

The city dweller — the farmer — the industrial worker — the owner of the spacious two-car garage in the suburbs — to all of these it brings a new measure of reliable, economical service.

Craftsmanship has been put into mass production. Today, more than ever, the new Ford is "a value far above the price."

EMPLOYMENT UNAFFECTED BY MACHINE AGE IF REGULATED

Machines Displace Workers Only in Shorter Swings

Abnormal Lack of Jobs Accounted for By Royal Meeker; in Long Run Mechanized Industries Create New Work for Employes.

An Interview Between Irving Fisher, Professor of Economics, Yale University, and Royal Meeker, U. S. Commissioner of Labor Statistics, 1913-20.

Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., April 27.—Royal Meeker, who has granted me the following interview on unemployment during the present business recession, was Commissioner of Labor Statistics by appointment of President Wilson, 1913-20, during a period of unusual fluctuations in employment and working conditions, including American participation in the war. Mr. Meeker was later for several years chief of the scientific division, international labor office of the League of Nations and secretary of labor and industry of Pennsylvania. He has answered my questions bearing on the present labor situation, therefore, out of a wide and varied experience. The first part of this interview follows:

"Do you agree with the recent expression of the London Times that there is a fallacy in the notion that increased mechanization of industry means increased employment?"

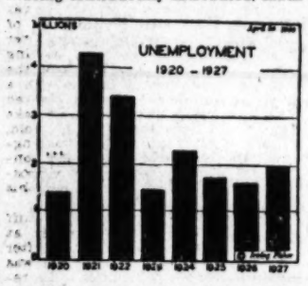
I do not know what the London Times editorial writer had in mind. I have seen only a summary of the editorial declaring "the theory that the mechanization of industry increases employment is a fallacy."

The facts are that the utilization of power machinery has enormously increased production of foodstuffs, raw materials of all kinds and especially finished goods. Increased production has enabled—nay, it has forced—population to increase during the nineteenth century at a rate never before known or dreamed of, in order to supply the demand for more consumers as well as more producers of goods. Had there been no "Industrial Revolution" it is conservative to say that the population of the world today would be not more than half what it now is. In 1820 the peoples of the world numbered only about 800,000,000 and had increased scarcely at all for centuries. Now the world's population is estimated at about 1,700,000,000 and is still growing rapidly.

Comfort Standards Improved.

The "mechanization of industry" has forced the population of England to increase more than five-fold since Malthus announced his famous doctrine of population in 1798. During the same time the standards of comfort have greatly improved. In the face of these indisputable facts, it can not be maintained that the numbers employed have remained constant or have declined because industry has been "mechanized."

What the Times editorial writer may have meant is that so long as improved machines and methods are being continuously introduced, indus-



Unemployment is a chronic disease the Hoover Report on Recent Economic Changes says of the period of 1920-27. Throughout the whole period it is surprising to find a persistent and large volume of unemployment even in the very active years, 1920, 1923 and 1926.

try is in a constant state of "upsetness" because men are being displaced from old jobs and lured or forced into new jobs.

The first effect of an improved machine or method of production is, of course, to displace men. That is why the workers have always opposed the introduction of labor-saving machinery. The worker does not care anything about the increased number of jobs at increased real wages which will come ten years or even one year hence. He does have a vital interest in his present job, his next meal, his next shirt, and the money to pay his next month's rent. Mechanization does benefit future workers at the expense of present workers—an expense that sometimes spells for the displaced worker financial ruin and physical suffering from hunger, cold and exposure. Industrial progress is achieved through the vicarious sufferings of the workers who are thrown out of jobs today, that their sons and grandsons may have better jobs with higher pay in the future.

The statement that machines displace men seems at first glance to contradict the statement that machines create more jobs. These two seemingly contradictory views are really not two views but one and are not contradictory. They are merely different aspects of the same thing. Machines do take the place of men in the short run; but in the long run they do increase production in the mechanized industries and create new jobs for men first in other industries and finally in the mechanized industries.

Employment Should Keep Pace.

"Accepting the estimate by Dr. Wesley C. Mitchell, of the National Bureau of Economic Research, that there has been a 'net income of unemployment between 1920 and 1927, which exceeds 650,000 people'—this estimate being based on 'minimum figures'—what, in your opinion, is the prospect of making employment keep pace with a normal increase in population?"

I do not accept the estimate that a "net increase of unemployment between 1920 and 1927, which exceeds 650,000 people" exists. It may be, perhaps, that an additional 650,000 persons of working age were not employed in any "gainful occupations" in 1927, as compared with 1920, but such a finding would not mean an increase of 650,000 in the ranks of the involuntarily unemployed. Many persons who ordinarily never would have worked for wages were working in 1920. When they lost their jobs they never tried to get back into "gainful employment." This was true of many thousands of "farmerettes" and other "war workers" both male and female. The proportion of persons of working age who are in schools and colleges has increased greatly—one might say alarmingly.

I am inclined to agree with Professor Mitchell to this extent, that the number and the proportion of those who want jobs and can't get them has increased considerably since 1920. But even if we could prove beyond doubt that the proportion of the unemployed has increased since 1920, that year of abnormal employment, this would not prove that "mechanization of industry," by increasing the per capita production of workers, must inevitably reduce the demand for labor and add continually, year after year, to the ever lengthening bread lines of the "technologically unemployed." It is quite to be expected that there must be a decrease since 1920 in the percentage of persons of working age who are working. This merely marks an adjustment toward "normalcy."

Machines Not to Blame.

It is undoubtedly true that unemployment is a chronic disease in a dynamic industrial society in which new inventions are continuously being made. I think the so-called "technological unemployment" today is no more serious than it has been many times in the past.

But chronic unemployment which, at irregular intervals, swells into a terrifying menace to our whole economic and political system is too wasteful, too cruel, and too dangerous to be allowed to continue as in the past. Violent industrial revolutions should be restrained and controlled just as we are beginning to limit and control armed conflicts.

It is stupid to permit ruthless profit-seeking individuals and corporations to throw the whole industrial organization out of gear by suddenly introducing new machines and methods which will turn thousands of workers into the streets without the means of earning the means to live. If unemployment, either chronic or acute, is to be kept down below the danger line, it can only be done by carefully planning our program of production to meet our reasonable consumption requirements to the end that workers throughout the year and from year to year. Changes in technique of production must proceed, but they should take place in orderly fashion.

INDUSTRIAL STOCKS LOWER IN PRICE

Rails and Utilities Also Decline in Values in New York.

RECOVERY SEEN SLOW

By H. B. BROUGHAM.
(Irving Fisher Service.)

The market in common industrial stocks took in sail last week, closing 1.54 per cent below the preceding week's close and down 2.5 per cent below the year's high of 165.6 reached April 11. It was generally called a corrective reaction, such as might be expected in an upward-trending market after panic lows. Business fared worse during March than was expected. The quarterly earnings reports were in many cases disappointing. Realization that recovery from the present business recession will be gradual had its part. But adjustments in stock prices are now made after the bottom of the recession has been reached and passed. The trend is still upward.

Seventeen of the 20 industrial groups declined last week, with motors the heaviest loser, off 6.4 per cent. Rails and preferred stocks have held a downward trend for four weeks, while utilities and all industrials have declined for but two weeks.

Stock Trading Values Up.

Average daily tradings of industrial common shares on the New York Stock Exchange last week gained by 13 per cent over the preceding week, in which tradings had fallen off from the April 12 high for the year by 19 per cent. They are now but 7.9 per cent below that high, and well above the average for this year, with rails, utilities and preferred stocks showing conspicuous losses. Tradings in all stocks rose by only $10,900,000, to $288,200,000.

Stock prices on European exchanges hold steady. Paris prices lost only one-tenth per cent last week, making the total loss for two weeks 2.9 per cent. Berlin prices sagged to record low March 21, gained well to the week ended April 4, and in the past three weeks have lost but 1 per cent. Prices in London have lost but 0.2 per cent in the past two weeks.

The index of 225 industrial common stocks shows what a substantially representative $100 worth of stocks in 1926 would now amount to if held unchanged since that year. This index is weighted by shares outstanding. The index of "50 most active," or market leaders, shows the result of reinvesting the $100 every week in the market favorites of that week. This index is weighted by shares traded, the list changing weekly. The last column of the table gives the average yield per cent on these weeks' 50 leaders at current prices.

Semiinvestment Stocks Suffer.

A steady downward trend in the semiinvestment group brought these stocks to 131.8 last week, based on 100 for 1926, compared with the high since the crash of 137.4 on April 10. The loss in two weeks was 4.4 per cent, of which 2.9 was recorded last week.

Investment stocks, on the other hand, have gained since last Monday's fall, closing the week off only 0.4 per cent from the preceding week's close, and but 1.1 per cent below the 1930 high of 204.7 on April 11.

The speculative group closed the week up 0.5 per cent from the preceding week's close, and only 1.7 per cent lower than the high of 134.4 on April 25.

Below are shown index numbers of prices of common industrials on the New York Stock Exchange, arranged in classes derived from Monday's ratings.

Bond Prices Sag; Ignore Basic Gain

Increased Purchasing Power of Dollar Adds Value Not Reflected.

The dollar yields of bonds bought a year ago will now buy 7 per cent more in goods, on the average, than when the bonds were purchased. If sold now the principal will buy 7 per cent more in goods. The general price level and its reciprocal, the purchasing power of the dollar, now reveal no effects of inflation which would tend to make securities with fixed return of less worth. While the bond market should show continued activity and higher prices, it sagged last week, as it has sagged for the past month.

But the weekly Fisher All-Bonds Price Index now shows only the slight loss of 0.1 per cent, which indicates a steadying of prices, as compared with the drop of nearly a full point between March 21 and April 17. The index stood at close of last week at 100.7, on the basis of 100 for 1926.

Average daily bond tradings during five weeks of downward movement on the New York Stock Exchange show a 54 per cent decrease from the high. Of 70 bonds in the index, 45 per cent were off at last week's close, 34 per cent were up, and 21 per cent showed no change. The week's new bond issues totaled $122,113,000, against $3,499,500 of new stock issues.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, April 27 (A.P.).—The general level of industrial and trade activity is still far below that of a year ago, says the Survey, economic publication of the Guaranty Trust Co., in its current issue. The unemployment situation is reported as less acute in some cities, though it is not "yet clear that a genuine Nation-wide improvement has been effected."

Lumber orders were 15 per cent less and shipments 12 per cent less than production for the week ending April 19, it is indicated in reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from 668 hardwood and softwood mills, which gave total production for the week as 374,629,000 feet. A week earlier 905 mills reported orders at 10 per cent and shipments at 13 per cent less than production, which totaled 392,356,000 feet.

SOUTHWEST WHEAT STILL DETERIORATES

Showers Have Done Little to Alleviate Conditions Caused by Drought.

DRYNESS DELAYS CORN

Local showers did little last week to alleviate the drought conditions which have prevailed for the past two months in the southwestern portion of the winter wheat belt.

Rain is needed for north and southwest spring wheat, and seeding has been delayed in northern areas by cold, but seeding is nearly completed in Minnesota. Early-planted South Dakota wheat is up and looks well.

Dryness in the Southwest continued to delay progress of early planted corn, and too great rainfall interrupted planting in northern areas, though some corn was planted in Indiana, Illinois and Nebraska.

Cotton was actively planted in Atlantic States; somewhat less so in Central States because of insufficient rainfall. Western seeding is delayed by dryness and cool nights.

Unstable Money Held To Mean Fewer Jobs

When there is an unstable dollar—that is, a dollar that will buy much more or much less in a short time than at its beginning—there is unstable employment. M. Henri Fuss, chief of the unemployment service at Geneva, Switzerland, has shown that during 1919-1925, sudden increases in the purchasing power of money in 22 countries were followed by trade depression and general joblessness in all of these countries, with few exceptions. That was because goods made at a certain level of costs had to be sold at a lower level of prices.

Panacea Give Against Panics.

Is there danger of another stock panic? Not if brokers' loans are kept low enough. In last fall's panic there was a piling up of margin accounts, as brokers' loans totals showed. Incidental to issuance of eight and one-half billions worth of new securities in nine months. A control of security issues could have prevented marginal indigestion.

DOLLAR BUYS MORE THAN IN 14 YEARS

Purchasing Power Last Week Was Indexed at 110.8; 100 in 1926.

WHOLESALE AT NEW LOW

A dollar will now buy more goods than at any previous time during the last fourteen years; a further decline in the commodity price level took place last week.

Using index numbers, with 1926 equaling 100, the purchasing power of the dollar last week rose to 110.8. The wholesale commodity price index receded 0.55 per cent to a new low of 90.2. The long commodity decline reached 90.4 for the week ended April 5, but the next two weeks saw recovery to 91.3. It was hoped at that time the price level would stage a sustained recovery, but the past two weeks have developed further weakness instead of strength, unstabilizing the commodity price level still more.

More than four times as many commodities fell as rose last week, while the movement was general throughout the groups.

	Price index (1926 equals 100)	Index of buying power of $ (1926 equals 100 cents)
April 26	90.2	110.8
April 19	90.7	110.3
April 12	91.3	109.6
April 5	90.0	111.1
Year ago	96.7	103.4
March average	90.8	110.2
February average	92.7	107.9
1929 average	96.3	103.9
1928 average	98.2	101.8
1927 average	94.2	106.2
1926 average	100.0	100.0
1925 average	95.2	95.1
1924 average	98.9	101.1
1923 average	101.1	98.9

All-Commodity Groups Weak.

The comodity price outlook is again dismal, with a sweeping fall in virtually all groups last week wiping out vestiges of the recent improvement, and bringing the all-commodity price level to another new low.

The downward movement of the week ended April 19, was not heavy, and was largely due to the drop in coppers. Several of the groups made substantial gains. The story last week was not so cheerful. Falls outnumbered rises by a wide margin, and all of the group indexes, with the exception of miscellaneous, were off. Semimanufactured goods, nonagricultural products, textiles, metals, building materials and chemicals made new lows.

Raw and semimanufactured goods bore the brunt of last week's slump, with coal, grain, provisions, leather, steel bars, zinc, tin and oils the heaviest losers. These two divisions fell by 0.78 and 0.7 per cent, respectively. Finished goods were off but 0.3 per cent.

Agricultural products suffered a decline of nearly 1 per cent. With nearly half the all-commodity falls being in foods and farm products, the purchasing power of farm products receded 0.55 per cent to 108.3.

Foreign commodity prices continued off. England and France have been down for two weeks, and Germany has declined for three weeks.

The Cash Requirements of Your Estate May Be Met Through Life Insurance
In the settlement of every estate, cash is required to meet immediate expenses. Debts, claims, various taxes, attorneys' and executors' fees must be paid.
Few estates contain sufficient cash to meet expenses until the sale of certain assets has been completed. Sometimes a forced sale causes a loss to the estate.
Adequate life insurance would prevent this and also enable the maker of a will to estimate accurately the amount of money his beneficiaries would inherit.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

City Service.

D. H.—I have saved some money which I would like to invest in Cities Service, providing you recommend it as an investment.

Answer—The stock may be regarded favorably from an investment standpoint. The company is now a billion dollar corporation. This public utility and oil giant on December 31, last, had assets of $1,090,227,318, an increase of $176,000,000 in 12 months. Both gross and net earnings last year mounted to record-breaking levels, and current cash assets exceed $61,000,000. Net earnings gained nearly $6,000,000 over 1928 and gross income nearly $20,000,000. Gross earnings from the public utility business increased 37 per cent, while the average annual sales of electrical energy were 11 per cent high, as compared with an increase of 9 per cent for the industry as a whole. Considering its cash and stock dividends, Cities Service may be viewed in a favorable light.

Pilot Radio.

M. R.—Have you any recent information on Pilot Radio & Tube? I am a holder of the stock.

Answer — Negotiations, interrupted last fall by the crash in the stock market, are under way again looking to a merger of Pilot and Norma Electric. Plans also call for the acquisition of six or eight other companies, which will be housed at the Pilot plant at Lawrence. Pilot interests are sponsoring a move for an airport at Lawrence, believing it would popularize that community. The same interests backed the recent successful airplane flight from New York to Havana to test the Pilot radio, and which proved a decided success for airplanes. Plans also call for the production of television sets on a large scale and a separation of the tube business. Taking into account the $1.20 annual dividend and earnings last year of $2 a share, the stock may be regarded as an attractive speculative investment for the long term.

F. H. Smith Co., Preferred.

C. R. B.—I would like some information regarding the preferred stock of the F. H. Smith Co., the local concern which has been in hot water for several months. I am holding the bag to the extent of 30 shares of F. H. Smith Co. of Washington preferred stock. What I want to know is what chance have I of getting my money back, and if so, about what percentage?

Answer—As a holder of F. H. Smith Co. preferred stock, you have, no doubt, received by this time notification of the formation of a new protective committee, with Harry M. Blair, president of the Associated Bond & Share Corporation, as chairman, and the Chatham Phenix National Bank as depository. It would appear advisable for you and all other holders of this preferred stock to align themselves with this committee for mutual protection. Whatever chances there may be of recovering, in whole or in part, money invested in this stock, in all probability, rest with this committee.

In making inquiries address Charles W. Storm, financial department of The Washington Post, and inclose a self-addressed stamped envelope for reply.

Segal Lock & Hardware.

F. C. G.—I am wondering if you will give me some late facts regarding Segal Lock & Hardware and Commonwealth & Southern?

Answer—Segal Lock & Hardware Co. reported for year ended December 31, 1929, net income of $246,913, equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $1.31 a common share. This compares with net of $85,161, or 47 cents a share (on adjusted basis) for year ended December 31, 1928. Substantial growth in earnings is accounted for by various acquisitions made during 1929, when company acquired Norwalk Lock Co., Kenilworth Tile Corporation and Universal Razor Blade Corporation. Commonwealth & Southern reported for twelve months ended January 31, 1930, net income, after interest, depreciation, amortization of debt discount and expense and earnings accruing on stock of subsidiary now owned by Commonwealth & Southern Corp., of $23,713,108, comparing with $18,871,883 in year 1929. In early part of February, stockholders ratified merger with Allied Power & Light and Penn-Ohio Edison companies.

NATS TROUNCE ATHLETICS FOR 6TH STRAIGHT, 11-6

Bannockburn Golf Won by Hill, Laws

Dr. UTZ Winner at Indian Spring in Opening Event.

Roland Mackenzie in Town, to Sail This Week for Briton.

THE opening of the golf season by the Bannockburn Club yesterday was marked by a tournament in which nearly 200 members participated. Competition was eighteen holes, medal play, handicap allowance, but after all the contestants had started the chairman of the golf committee, W. Fred Gyrne, drew the names in pairs.

When partners had thus been selected by lot, their scores were taken from their cards with the result that Norman J. Hall, 82—8—74, and P. J. Laws, 93—27—66, were winners with a total of 140. The runners-up were Dr. William I. Ogus, 95—27—68, and William H. Alexander, 88—10—78, a total of 146. There was a tie for third prize between John Thacker, 83—8—75, and J. W. Reese, 96—23—73, and Leo F. Pass, 82—6—76, and Sam W. Converse, 93—21—72, each with a total of 148.

The prize for the women's division went to Miss Julia C. Connor and Mrs. J. O. Rhyne, each with 42 net, a total of 84. Miss Alice Short, net 50, and Miss S. E. Gannt, net 42, won the second prize, and Mrs. D. E. McCabe, net 52, and Miss F. B. Parker, net 41, were in third position.

Women's Tourney Transferred.

The regular monthly tournament of the Women's District Golf Association, which has been transferred from the Columbia Club to the Manor Club, will be played next Monday and noth this morning, as erroneously published.

The initial event of the season at the Indian Spring Club yesterday was an eighteen-hole medal play competition, with handicap allowance. The winner was Dr. A. Thomas Utz, 89—24—65. G. J. Richardson, 90—23—67, was runner-up, and J. W. Harvey, 77—770, won the third prize.

MacKenzie Now Confident.

Roland Mackenzie yesterday paid a brief visit to the Columbia Club and gathered up his clubs and other golfing paraphernalia preparatory to his departure this morning for New York, where he will join the other members of the team which will sail this week for England to engage in the Walker Cup team matches.

"I have been practicing during spare minute of my time," he said, "and I hope that I will be able to assist the American team in keeping the trophy on this side of the Atlantic. I remember that when I first went abroad with the Walker Cup Team I was naturally nervous, but as my present trip is not my first experience, I am more confident. All that I can say is that I will do the best I can."

Women Golfers Invade Baltimore.

A team of Washington women golfers will journey to Baltimore today to play a team match against Baltimore players at the Elkridge Hunt Club. The personnel of the Washington contestants will be Miss Susan Hacker, Mrs. J. W. Beller, Mrs. John F. Dryden, Mrs. McCook Knox, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, Mrs. Hume Wrong and Frank R. Keefer.

50,000 Watch Yanks Drop Game, 8-7

Ruth's Homer, 2 On in 9th, Is Futile as Red Sox Win.

Webb, Late of Nats, Aids Boston With Home Run.

NEW YORK, April 27 (N.Y.W.N. S.).—Loose pitching, some of it frayed and some of the schoolboy variety, cut short the winning streak of two games of the Yanks today and dropped them again to the cellar in the American League. The score was 8 to 7. The Red Sox were aided by homers by Earl Webb and Russell Scaritt.

Babe Ruth tried hard to win the game with his second home run of the 1930 season and two other drives, but the big hitter and Arle Combs and Lou Gehrig couldn't quite make it. The Babe had some 50,000 fans roaring in the ninth when he rammed a four-bagger over the wall with two on board—the only trouble with the rap was there were only two on instead of three.

The Babe's wallop left the Yanks a run behind, and, although Gehrig came along with a single—a drive which narrowly missed being a homer, too, for it hit the screen in right—there were two out and Lazzeri ended the game with a long fly.

Hoyt Pounded Hard in Debut as Starter.

Thirteen hits and seven runs should win most games, but not with the sort of pitching the Yanks had today. Hoyt was found for eleven hits in seven frames in his first home start of the year. Roy Sherid allowed four hits and Foster Edwards four, and they all hurt. It would have been better, as it turned out, to have let Hoyt stay. But, of course, no one could foresee that the Yankees would rise up and smack John Russell for five runs in the last two innings when he had held them for two runs in seven.

The ninth showed the Yankees at their best. They had seen Dickey fly out and Hargrave, batting for the last pitcher, Rhodes, pop to the infield, when the wonderful Combs smacked a double to left. Then Koenig waited out Russell and walked and Ruth swung mightily on the first ball and found the right field seats.

Here came Gehrig's hard luck. He drove almost in the same spot as Ruth, but lower, and the ball caught the screen and Gehrig had to stop at first. When Lazzeri's long one was clutched by Scarritt it was all over.

Georgetown, Bauserman Nines in 6-6 Deadlock

The Bauserman Motor Co. and Georgetown A. C. Nines battled ten innings yesterday on the Arlington, Va., diamond to a 6-6 score. Bennie Wormsley and Dick Hughes staged a pretty mound duel. Wormsley was wild for the Motormen at the start, but settled down and kept the heavy-hitting Georgetown clan in check in the closing rounds.

GIANTS BEAT ROBINS FOR 7TH IN ROW

Fitzsimmons Scatters Hits as McGraw's Men Win, 10-4.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 27 (A. P.).—The New York Giants extended their streak to seven straight victories by burying the Robins under a 10-to-4 score today. Fred Fitzsimmons pitched the whole game and kept Brooklyn's ten hits well scattered. Home runs by Herman and Wright and the sensational fielding of Gilbert featured the game from the Brooklyn standpoint.

Clark, who started for Brooklyn, was ineffective and was charged with his fourth defeat of the year. Morrison, who relieved him, was worse. Reese hit a home run into the left field bleachers, with the bases filled, in the ninth to end all arguments.

Cards Swamp Reds, 10-5; Street Is Chased

Cincinnati, April 27 (A.P.).—The St. Louis Cardinals pounded five Cincinnati pitchers for twelve hits which, combined with seven bases on balls enabled them to triumph over the Reds, 10 to 5, before 11,126 fans in the series opener here today. The Reds also were given seven passes and garnered eleven hits, but were unable to make them count for runs. Manager Gabby Street, Pitcher Haines and Catcher Wilson were ordered from the park after an altercation with Umpire Klem in the sixth inning.

Clancy, at First Base, Has no Chances as Browns Bow.

ST. LOUIS, April 27 (A.P.).—The Chicago White Sox defeated the St. Louis Browns, 2 to 1, today in an extraordinary game that saw Clancy, the Chicago first baseman, go through the entire nine innings without an assist or a put-out, a feat not recorded in organized baseball for 39 years. McCauley, playing first for the old Washington American Association Club, performed a similar feat August 6, 1891.

It is a record for modern baseball. The excellent mound work of Alphonse Thomas and McKain gave Chicago the game. They struck out eight batters, and allowed only five hits. Thomas, who started, retired in the seventh inning after injuring his arm.

Connie Mack Rates Nats Highly

Veteran Leader Sees Club as "One to Beat in Race."

Marberry to Oppose Yanks in Series Opener Today.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

ANOTHER first-class baseball attraction is on tap at the Georgia Avenue Stadium starting this week, with Babe Ruth and the Yankees here this afternoon, tomorrow and Wednesday. The Nationals beat the New Yorkers in their only previous meeting this season and have high hopes of repeating today. Fred Marberry is due to draw the pitching assignment.

The Yankees have not been traveling as fast this spring as is their usual custom and, with their big guns not functioning as of yore, and their pitching prospects not particularly bright, the Nats are hoping to take at least two of the three games.

Connie Mack, Philadelphia pilot, is one baseball expert who regards Manager Walter Johnson's team as a threat. Saturday night, he remarked that "the team which beats the Nationals will win the pennant," while before yesterday's game he congratulated one of the Washington Club officials on his "probable pennant winnera."

While the veteran Mahout of the White Elephants probably was being what might be termed supercourteous, there is no doubt but he has a wholesome respect for this year's edition of the Nats—and not without reason.

Barrett on Scene Yesterday.

"Sad Sam" Jones was charged with a balk in the Macks' first yesterday just when it looked as though he had stopped their rally, as the delivery was a third strike for the third out on Jimmy Dykes. It let Miller advance, but Dykes then ended the round by rolling to Bluege. Jones was charged with another balk in the seventh, after one had been called on Ehmke in the fifth.

Outfielder Bill Barrett, newest Nat, obtained from the Red Sox in a trade which sent Earl Webb to the City of Culture, arrived in Washington Saturday night and was on the job yesterday. Barrett was quite enthusiastic over the shift.

"My home is in Cambridge, just outside of Boston, and that is the only reason I hated to leave the Sox. Naturally a ball player would be pleased at the chance of leaving a team with Boston's poor prospects to get on one which is likely to get somewhere in the race like the Washington Team is," he stated, adding that he planned to bring his family here shortly.

Jimmy Foxx, Athletic first-sacker, turned in an exceptional catch in the Nats' second yesterday, racing all the way to the stands to snare Loepp's pop-foul with his gloved hand.

Ossie Bluege contributed a sparkling play in the fourth, snaring Ehmke's hard grounder with his gloved hand after the ball apparently had passed him.

Myer, Judge Steal On Cochrane.

The Nats did some fancy base running in their fourth, both Myer and Judge stealing easily on Catcher Mickey Cochrane.

With the possible aid of the umpires, the Mackmen broke up a Nat rally in the fourth on the freakiest kind of a freaky double play. This probably set a record for the time it took to complete it. With Judge on first, Bluege lined low to Boley, who apparently trapped the ball. He tossed out Bluege at first, with Judge going to third. After the ball had been tossed to Ehmke and the pitcher was about to make his next delivery, Boley suddenly decided that maybe he had caught the drive on a fly. He called for the ball, touched second and, much to every one's surprise, Umpire Owen waved Judge out. The Washington players argued long and loud, but "Umps" Moriarty also thought Boley caught the ball in Nats Gain Lead After Macks Opener With 3-Run Assault.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

CONNIE MACK and his Athletics left last night for Boston, where they hope to find the Red Sox "more dependable," as one of them expressed it. Despite the fact that the Nats beat them in Philadelphia Monday they considered this just a happen-so and, apparently looked upon their visit here in the nature of a joy ride. It was, but the Nationals did all of the riding, cleaning up in the three-game set, 25,000, the largest crowd to attend a game here in several seasons, seeing them take the final yesterday, 11 to 6.

The triumph, incidently, was the Nats' sixth in succession and their fourth in a row at the expense of the Mackmen, giving Johnson's team as many victories over the A's this season as they were able to turn in during all of 1929.

For those who like plenty of run-making, yesterday's clash was all that they could ask for, with the Nats, as has been their wont in recent games, coming from behind to gain the verdict, for "Sad Sam" Jones, making his season's debut on the native hill, spotted the Mackmen three markers in the opening canto.

Walberg Passes First Three To Face Him.

George (Rube) Walberg, however, was as wild as a March hare, and his shift on the pitching mound lasted less than two innings, during which time the Nats made plenty of hay, and they were never headed thereafter. Howard Ehmke relieved Walberg, and he proved to be a "cousin" to most of the Nats, this word being applied by batters to flingers whom they find easy.

Ehmke had little more than his world's series reputation after his opening victory over the Chicago Cubs last fall, being knicked for a dozen safeties, the biggest of which was Goose Goslin's second home run of the season, a mile-high looper over the right-field garden wall starting the fourth. The "Wild Goose of the Potomac" had greeted Ehmke with a single in the second, and he cracked out a double in the seventh to take atick honors for the day. All told, fifteen hits rained off the Washington bats, this being the second consecutive game in which the supposedly punchless Nats cracked out this number of bingles.

Jones did not have all of his stuff yesterday and was quite wobbly at the start, but he settled down after his mates gave him a lead and was never in serious difficulties. His relief starting the eighth was merely a precautionary act on the part of Manager Johnson.

Mackmen Jump Into Three-Run Lead.

Just as soon as the game started, Jones walked Bishop, who advanced on an out. Then came a double by Cochrane, a triple by Simmons, and a sacrifice fly by Foxx, netting three alien runs. Another walk and a balk followed but these did no harm. Had Walberg been at his best, the harm probably already would have been done, however, but "R

STAR FIELD COMPETES IN $25,000 DIXIE HANDICAP

Racing Shifts To Pimlico Today

Toro Likely Favorite With Mike Hall Highly Rated.

Odds Drop to 4 to 1 on Gallant Fox for Derby.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

THE Dixie Handicap, $25,000 added, marks the opening at Pimlico of one of the outstanding racing meetings of this or any contingent, the richest twelve-day meeting in the world. The attention of the racing world will be centered on the Baltimore track today for the historic Dixie, and the Maryland Jockey Club course will hold the lion's share of interest for the entire two weeks, leading up to the Preakness, the $50,000 added stake for 3-year-olds that ranks with the Kentucky Derby and the Belmont Stakes.

Havre de Grace, closing Saturday, had its big day as the final attraction, displaying the wares of its Derby and Preakness material lavishly in the $10,000 added Chesapeake, won by the Seagram Stable's Sweet Sentiment. Jamiaca Saturday, probably set a record for attendance, and eclipsed all other tracks in its test for the classics in the running again of the Wood Memorial, won by the outstanding 3-year-old, shown this year in Gallant Fox, of the Belair Stud of William Woodward. The Sir Galahad III colt beat Crack Brigade four lengths, and Desert Light six lengths, a mile and 70 yards, in 1:43 3-5.

Gallant Fox Proves Class.

Those who failed to get a solid Derby pointer on Gallant Fox has searched in vain. His future price was cut from 8 to 1 to 4 to 1 for the Derby as soon as the news was flashed over the country of the convincing performance.

Lexington had a display of Derby material in two races in which Buckeye Poet and Sydney humbled the Kentcky Derby Star, Dedicate.

Racing now is quiet at these tracks as Pimlico steps into the arena, and first off will present the Dixie, an old-fashioned handicap, for -3-year olds and upward, at a mile and three-sixteenths. On April 29, 1929, was fought a bitter battle in the Dixie, in which Diavolo beat Victorian a head and Display was third. None of these handicap warriors are in this renewal of the Dixie, but Toro, Victrian's great rival, which was not in the last Dixie, is in this renewal, and with top weight. It was in the Preakness year before last that Victorian won a nose victory from the E. B McLean horse, Toro.

With these giants out of the Dixie, it seems that Toro stands alone, were it not for Mike Hall, which recently made an unsuccessful invasion of England. The Dixie field has nineteen horses.

NATS DEFEAT MACKS FOR 6TH IN ROW

25,000 See Goslin in Star Role as A's Bow, 11-6.

found his bearings and was not scored on again until the seventh, at which time one or two allen tallies did not make any difference.

Manager Mack admitted defeat after this round, sending in a flock of rookies, but they did not give up and molded one marker off Liska's offerings in the eighth, the result of Ehmke's single, an error by Judge, and a one-baser by Spencer Harris, who tried out witn the Nats last spring.

Nats Have Several Scoring Frames.

While the Macks were seeing most of their batting efforts go for naught, the home boys were pecking away at Ehmke's slants. The Mack hurler hit Bluege in the third and this gave the Nats a run when followed by singles by Ruel and West. Goslin opened the fourth with his homer, and then Myer's single and theft and Judge's one-shot netted one more.

Washington's final rally came in the sixth, three more runs being molded on singles by Cronin and West, Judge's double, another blow in the back received by Bluege, Ruel's sacrifice fly and a second pass drawn by Jones.

Eleven runs is the largest total rung up by the Nats this season, and they took advantage of their big margin to get a few errors out of their systems, one each being charged to Bluege, Cronin and Judge. Bluege, however, came through with no less than three brilliant plays, so his miscue easily can be forgiven.

Running Goslin closely for batting honors were Rice, Myer, Judge and Ruel, each getting two safeties, one of Judge's being a double. Cochrane and Simmons led the Mackian attack, each getting an extra-baser and single.

FREAK DOUBLE PLAY STIRS NATS' FANS

flight and the double number was allowed.

The ground rule which limits balls bounding into the stands in right to two bases and only a two-base advance to runners, cost the Nats a run in the sixth. After Cronin had singled, a roller off Judge's bat bounding among the fans. Cronin counted a moment later, however, on Ruel's air sacrifice.

Longchamps Feature Won by Le Tourbillon

Longchamps, France, April 27—(A.P.)—Le Tourbillon, owned by Senor de Alzaga Unzue, of the Argentine, won the seventy-third biannual stakes for three-year-olds from a field of the best horses in training, all of them Grand Prix de Paris candidates, today.

Trailing over a distance of the mile and one-quarter, Le Tourbillon uncovered a burst of speed in the last furlong to win by half a length from James Hennessy's Feu de Joie. Baron Edgurad's de Rothschild's Godiche, hitherto beaten as a three-year-old, finished third. The winner paid five to one in the betting.

OPEN RACE SEEN IN SCHOOL BASEBALL SERIES

Tech-Western Open Season Tomorrow

All Teams Fortified in Box, Except Business.

Central Particularly Strong on Mound, With 4 Stars.

WITH the opening of another interhigh school championship series due tomorrow, with Tech playing Western at Central, and four of the five teams apparently in possession of that one commodity usually characteristic of a contender, prospects of the 1930 baseball series resembling the football and baseball "open race" seasons of the 1929-30 scholastic year, are unusually bright.

For, in every school save one, at least one capable pitcher has been uncovered and in the past, the team with "one good pitcher" has usually taken the titl. This yar, nottaoin taken the title. This year, not only one, but two or three capable hurlers have cropped up in at least three schools, while Dick Lanahan, the lone Eastern boxman, looks capable without assistance.

Only Business has failed to reveal a hurler who may be depended upon, but, as has been the story for many years past, "Such is the fate of the Stenogs."

If the box mainstays of the four remaining teams live up to preseason showings, it would not surprise were all the teams to come neck and neck down to the wire, as was the case last year, when the last game of the campatign decided the title.

In this respect, Central, perhaps, is the most favored, the Blue and White having four pitchers on whom it will place reliance. Lynch, Debettencourt, Cooke and Pollock are forming a well-rounded mound corps for the Columbia Heights Team with no rating having been given to any of the quartet.

In Capt. Ben Spigel and Price, Tech has two hurlers from whom much is expected, with both having impressed in early season games. Western has Bill Payne, Poore and Greene, the latter a southpaw, while Charley Albert may also be called in from the outfield to take a position in the box.

Although only one hurler has shown enough to warrant any bright predictions at Eastern, Lanahan, 16-year-old six-footer looks able to make Coach "Chief" Guyon forget about the scarcity of capable slabsmen. Lanahan possesses pitching ability and knowledge and appears to know what it is all about when he steps into the box.

With but one day remaining before their debut, Tech and Western's coaches last night just about had decided who would take the field for their respective clubs in the opener. With Capt. Spigel on the mound, Tech will line up with English behind the bat, Russell on first, Wellens at second, Nelson at third, Benner at short, and Wells, Chumbris, and either Minor or Thompson in the outfield. Nelson and Benner may exchange positions in the infield, while Coach Edwards will pick his third choice for the outer gardens tomorrow.

Of this group, only English, Spigel and Wellens played last year, with Spigel being converted from an outfielder of 1929. There is also a possibility that Levy may take a place on the left side of the infield in Tuesday's inaugural.

A few decisions as to Western's line-up are to be made today inasmuch as Coach Clifton Moore has been out of the city during the past week and will not see his charges until then. There is some doubt as to whether Yowell will take his place behind the bat, being troubled with an infected back, and, if he is not able to work, Bob Fletcher will assume the receiving role.

Quincy Owens is listed for either first or second. If he is on the initial sack, Oliver will be at second, while if Owens is on that base, Fox will go to first. Freeman at short and Clark at third complete the infield, while Tabler, Dick Fletcher and Albert will make up the outfield. Both Dick and Bob Fletcher are brothers of George Fletcher, captain of the 1929 nine.

Ballston Nine Wins Over Grocers, 5 to 2

McGolerick and Show held the District Grocery Stores Nine to six scattered hits yesterday, while their mates gathered eleven to gain a 5 to 2 decision on the Ballston diamond. Estes, Roberts, Kidwell and Jackson led the batters.

Chicago Holds Week's Ring Feature

Griffiths-Gagnon in Return Fight on Wednesday.

Rosenbloom-Johnson in Garden Feature Same Night.

NEW YORK, April 27 (A.P.).—Despite the return of boxing to Madison Square Garden this week, Chicago fans will see one bout that promises the most sensational milling. At the Chicago Stadium on Wednesday night, Tuffy Griffiths, Sioux City, Iowa, heavyweight, meets Jack Gagnon, of Boston, in a return match that should give the spectators a real run for their money.

Griffiths was bowling over opponents right and left until he met Gagnon at Philadelphia a few weeks ago, but the Boston heavyweight upset all expert calculations and Griffiths as well, winning on a technical knockout in six rounds. Griffiths probably will be a betting favorite to reverse that verdict in their coming encounter. Stanislaus Loayza, of Chile, and Joey Medill, Chicago lightweight, will provide the action in the ten-round semifinal.

Madison Square Garden's reopening card on Wednesday offers a return meeting between Maxey Rosenbloom, Harlem clown, and Larry Johnson, Chicago Negro light heavyweight puncher, as a feature attraction. Johnson gave Rosenbloom an even battle in their first meeting, but was disqualified in the sixth round on a foul. The semifinal will bring together Johnny Indrisano, Boston welterweight, and Freddy Fitzgerald, of Youngstown, Ohio.

Loughran-Schaaf Fight At Philly Tonight.

Philadelphia's weekly Monday night card will be featured by a ten-rounder between Tommy Loughran, retired light-heavyweight champion, and Ernie Schaaf, of Boston. Primo Carnera again is billed on the West Coast, meeting Tom Sayers, of Detroit, at Seattle Friday night.

Other bouts on the national schedule include (all ten rounds unless otherwise noted):

MONDAY—At Philadelphia, Jack Demave, New York, vs. Walter Cobb, Philadelphia, and Babe Hunt, Ponca City, Okla., vs. Big Bill Hartwell, Kansas City, heavyweights; at New York, Vincent Forgione, Philadelphia, vs. Harry Ebbets, New York, middleweights; at Chicago, Tommy Rios, Chicago, vs. Jimmy Evans, Seattle, middleweights, and Edgar Norman, Norway, vs. Tuffy O'Dowd, Idaho, light-heavyweights, each eight; at Boston, Tiger Jack Payne, New York, vs. Harry Allen, Brockton, Mass., light-heavyweights.

TUESDAY—At Boston, Andy Callahan, Lawrence, Mass., vs. Johnny Farr, Cleveland, lightweights; at Oklahoma City, Jeff Carroll, Biloxi, Miss., vs. Joe Packo, Toledo, heavyweights; at Los Angeles, Mike Hector, Oceanside, Calif., vs. Joe Cordosa, Los Angeles, middleweights; at New York, Allie Wolff, New York, vs. George Deschenr, New York, middleweights, six.

WEDNESDAY—At San Francisco, Charley Hernandez, San Francisco, vs. Paddy Walthier, Chicago, lightweights.

FRIDAY—At Hollywood, Hector McDonald, Vancouver, vs. Johnny Lamar, Los Angeles, lightweights; at Toledo, Luis Carpentero, Toledo, vs. Jimmy Campbell, Detroit, flyweights.

SATURDAY—At Los Angeles, Bert Colima, Whittier, Calif., vs. Ray Still, Oklahoma City, middleweights.

Rauber Quits Central Nine for Examinations

"Ty" Rauber, at present coaching the Central High Baseball Team, will drop that role after his club's first interhigh game with Business next Friday. The youthful mentor, who is preparing for his final law exams at Georgetown University, will hand over the team to Bert Coggins, athletic director of the school, after that date.

Rauber assumed the baseball job for the first time this season with the understanding that he be relieved of its duties when exam time rolled around. He has whipped an untried team into tip-top shape and one which gives promise of developing into a contender from the start.

Coggins got his first job of coaching the 1930 nine in its game against Gettysburg a week ago yesterday, but relinquished the reins to Rauber last week. He will be in complete charge after Friday.

Wildermuth Through As Hilltop Athlete

Karl Wildermuth, Georgetown's intercollegiate 100-yard dash champion, probably will forego competition the remainder of his career at the Hilltop as a result of the recurrence of his leg injury last Saturday in the Penn relays at Philadelphia. He is a senior and is due to graduate in June.

ailing all spring, one of the tendons Wildermuth's right leg has been having been "pulled" in a race on January 18 and reinjured later in practice before the indoor intercollegiates.

He had won his heat in the 100 of the Penn relays and was running in one of the semifinals when he stopped about half-way up the stretch, the tendon again having become strained.

Tallan Disappears

By Phil Nowlan and Dick Calkins

I HAD FALLEN ASLEEP IN THE 20TH CENTURY. TO WAKE UP FIVE HUNDRED YEARS LATER, WHEN OUR SCIENTISTS HAD INVENTED "JUMPING BELTS," ENABLING THEIR WEARERS TO LEAP GREAT DISTANCES. THE TIGERMEN OF MARS, VISITING EARTH, BROUGHT WITH THEM ILLANA, PRINCESS OF THE GOLDEN PEOPLE OF MARS, WITH WHOM LT. BURK FELL DESPERATELY IN LOVE. THEY KIDNAPPED SALLY, THE LITTLE SISTER OF MY FRIEND, WILMA, AND WITH HER AND ILLANA SHOT BACK TO MARS. FOLLOWING THEM IN OUR NEW SPACE-TRAVELING ROCKET SHIP, WE RESCUED TALLAN, A PRINCE OF JUPITER, FROM HIS WRECKED INTERPLANETARY CRAFT. TALLAN AND I THEN DESCENDED TO THE SURFACE OF MARS, DISGUISED AS MARTIANS. WE WERE LEAPING ALONG A CANAL TOWARD THE TIGER CAPITAL, WHEN WE WERE STOPPED BY A GUARD.

SUDDENLY THE MARTIAN WENT LIMP, AND WE CLIMBED TO OUR FEET.
WHAT DID YOU HIT HIM WITH, TALLAN?
NOTHING. I GAVE HIM THE SLEEP RAY. BUT WAIT—THIS FORCE-RAY GUN OF HIS GIVES ME AN IDEA.

LIGHTENED BY THE JUMPING BELT HE WORE UNDER HIS MARTIAN DISGUISE, TALLAN USED THE FORCE-RAY GUN LIKE A ROCKET PROPELLER.
HEY! HEY! WHERE YOU GOING?

Keeps His Word; May Win Mercy

Michigan Professor, Who Went to See Father, Returns to Cell.

Special to The Washington Post.

Jackson, Mich., April 27.—Because he kept his word with the State of Michigan and because mitigating circumstances have been discovered in connection with his sentence, William R. Howell, inmate of the Michigan State Prison, may have his minimum term cut in two, it was announced by Arthur D. Wood, State parole commissioner.

Howell, who is 21 years old, was sentenced in December, 1929, in recorder's court, Detroit, to serve one to five years for carrying concealed weapons. He was released February 24 on a two weeks parole to make a trip to Little Rock, Ark., without guard, to visit his 65-year-old father, who is awaiting electrocution for a triple slaying.

The younger Howell reported at the prison on March 10 in accordance with the terms of his parole. Commissioner Wood said he had been told the inmate was carrying a weapon in Detroit because he feared an attack.

The commissioner indicated that on June 3, at the end of six months of Howell's sentence, he will recommend to Gov. Green that a parole be granted.

FIRE ZONES DRAWN IN FAIRFAX COUNTY

Each Fire Company Assigned Some Definite Area to Protect.

FLAG GIVEN TO SCHOOL

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245. Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 919-J-1.

The committee composed of the fire chiefs of the five volunteer fire departments in Fairfax County met yesterday afternoon at the fire engine house at McLean and prepared a fire zone map of the county, marking out the alarm zones under jurisdiction of the various companies.

The territory as zoned yesterday is as follows:

Falls Church department—All territory lying east of a line beginning at Fort Humphreys passing through Accotink and Accotink Station, then along county road No. 16 through Springfield, Annandale to Masonville, then along Gallows road through Merrifield to Magarity road, then along this road to Lemon road to Kirby's Corner, then to Chesterbrook and from there to Chain Bridge.

The territory of the Fairfax department includes all land west of the same line from Fort Humphreys to Merrifield. Turning there it continues along Sherman road to the Lee highway, thence to Oakton. From Oakton the line extends to Skillman's Store, then to Chantilly on through Centerville, from there it follows the Lee highway to the county line at Bull Run.

The McLean department will answer all calls within the territory bounded by the Potomac River beginning at Dailey's Store on the north to Chain Bridge, on the south from there to Chesterbrook, then along Lemon road to Tysons Crossroads, then along the Leesburg pike to Colvin Run, from there to Forestville and then back to Dailey's Stoer to the river.

The public chool at Baileys Cross Roads was presented with a large American flag by Fairfax Council, No. 26, Order of Fraternal Americans, with an appropriate ceremony. C. C. Carr, president of the Fairfax Lodge, presided. The pupils of the school, of which Miss Alvis Harlow is principal, presented a short program of entertainment. This included flag drills and a short play by the seventh grade entitled "Our First Flag." The third and fourth grade pupils sang a flag song and the two primary grades gave a flag exercise.

The principal address was made by John H. Trimyer, of Alexandria, State treasurer of the order, who explained the aims and purposes of the organization. Miss Bessie Kenyon, of Vienna, State secretary of the Daughters of America, the companion organization, also gave a short talk. The flag was accepted on behalf of the school by Miss Harlow.

The Sunday school workers of the Southern Methodist Church at Lincolnia have elected Frederick Stultz superintendent, T. W. Bevis, assistant superintendent; Ronald Lewis, secretary; Miss Lola Foster, organist, and Mrs. Will Bennett, Miss Claudia Grey, Lola Foster, Mary Lewis and Frederick Stultz as teachers.

A series of revival meetings are being held by Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Wicker, of Richmond, at the Columbia Baptist Church in Falls Church. These services will be held every evening except Saturday at 7:45 o'clock through May 4. Mrs. John T. Bowen has arranged special musical programs. She will be assisted by Clarence Shotwell.

The Vienna department will answer all fire alarms within the territory, beginning at Tyson's Cross Roads along the Leesburg Pike to Colvin Run, then across country to Pinecrest, thence to Skilman's Store. From there the line runs back to Oakton across country to the Lee Highway and Sherman road back to Merrifield, from there along Gallows road back to Tyson's Cross Roads.

The Herndon department will be that lying south of a line beginning at Dailey's Store to Colvin Run, thence to Pinecrest, and from there to Skillman's Store. Beginning at this store the territory will include all north of a line from there to Chantilly then to Centerville, then along the Lee Highway to the county line at Bull Run.

To avoid confusion in the territory along the division lines it was agreed that the territory would overlap 1 mile each way. This will not make the division of responsibility for each company hard and fast and the usual cooperation will continue in case of need. Fire calls within each area will be referred to the company first responsible for that section. The call for additional help when necessary is to be made by the chief of the local company. It was also planned to cooperate with the telephone company in seeing that telephone operators refer emergency fire calls to the nearest department to the fire rather than to the company which has its telephone connection through that exchange.

The personnel of this committee includes Chief E. N. Ward, of Falls Church, Chairman; Chief J. H. Beattie, of McLean; Chief Lloyd E. Wright, of Vienna; Chief Walter Farr, of Herndon, and Chief Allen H. Williams, of Fairfax, who is also the Fireman's Association's county fire marshal.

The Vienna Volunteer Fire Department will hold its regular monthly meeting tonight in the town hall at Vienna. The Herndon Volunteer Fire Company will also meet tonight in the engine house at Herndon. Several questions of local importance to each company will be discussed. The McLean department will meet tonight to consider changes in its constitution and by-laws.

The Piedmont Chapter of American War Mothers at Falls Church will make plans at their meeting tonight for selling carnations during the drive the week preceding Mother's Day, May 11. The money will be used to aid in the chapter's relief work.

Commissioner of Revenue James E. Kincheloe, of Fairfax, will be at Dailey's store, at Shady Oak, today and White's store, at Dranesville, tomorrow to assist taxpayers in those two precincts to make out income tax and tangible and intangible personal property returns for the year.

Next Saturday will be the last day on which the residents of Fairfax County can pay their poll tax in time to entitle them to vote either in the Democratic primary in August or the general election in November. While it is not necessary that the personal or real estate taxes be paid at this time the head tax must be paid six months prior to the election in order for the taxpayer to claim the right of franchise.

During this week Miss Sara E. Thomas, Fairfax county home demonstration agent and 4-H Club leader, will visit a number of the 4-H clubs in the county to assist them in preparing for the part they are to take in the May Day pageant to be given at the annual 4-H Club rally Saturday. She also will give several food demonstrations. Her first visit this afternoon will be to the Ivakota Farms for a food demonstration. Tomorrow afternoon she will visit the 4H clubs at Colvin Run and Herndon and give each a demonstration on the making of oatmeal cookies. Wednesday afternoon the club at Vienna will be visited and plans made for the pageant. Thursday morning a luncheon demonstration will be held at Baileys Cross Roads and in the afternoon she will take charge of the 4-H Club at Annandale in a drill which they will present at the pageant. She also will meet the Annandale Home Demonstration Club the same afternoon and explain unusual ways of preparing fruits and vegetables.

Miss Thomas will give a talk relating to the 4-H Club and home demonstration work over station WJSV Wednesday noon, and Thursday evening she will address persons interested in poultry raising at Andrew Chapel. Friday she will complete final arrangements for the rally day exercises to be held on the fair grounds at Fairfax Saturday.

The second of a series of mass meetings of the citizens of Mount Vernon, Falls Church and Lee districts of Fairfax County will be held in Pohick Hall tonight at 7:30 o'clock for the purpose of discussing ways and means of financing the building of a hard-surfaced road from Annandale to Pohick. The first meeting was held at Annandale several weeks ago, where prominent speakers told of the benefits that would be derived from building such a road and of the undeveloped territory that would be opened by its construction.

The original route of the proposed road would follow the present route of the Annandale-Newington road by the way of Springfield to the Telegraph road, thence to Pohick. A large delegation from Lee district, representing the Rolling Road Association, protested this plan and suggested that the route of the road be changed so as to follow the Rolling road in Mount Vernon and Lee districts to Pohick Crossing, then to the Washington-Richmond highway at Pohick. They claimed that while this road is about 2 miles longer, it would benefit more people.

The Rolling road, which the citizens of Lee district hope to have improved, is one of the oldest roads in Fairfax County. It was used long before the Revolutionary War as one of the main highways between the southwestern section of the county and Alexandria, which was at one time the county seat and the river port. It obtained its name from the countless number of hogsheads of tobacco which were rolled from the large plantations in this section of the State to the port.

Buffalo Scientists Study Sea Floor

Will Investigate Conditions in Atlantic Off 2 Coast Points.

Special to The Washington Post.

Buffalo, April 26.—The Buffalo Museum of Science, the only private institution in the United States with complete staff for the study of all aspects of oceanographic problems, this year will conduct scientific surveys at two separated spots on the Atlantic Coast.

Announcing the projects for this year, Dr. Charles J. Fish, director of the museum, let it be known that one group, working in conjunction with scientists from the Mount Desert Island biological laboratory and from Brown University, will continue the study of biological, chemical and physical conditions in the Gulf of Maine, which it started last summer.

Another group, including scientists from Princeton University, will make a similar study of conditions at Andres Island in the Bahamas.

The herring fishery off Maine, Dr. Fish pointed out, may be tremendously affected by the erection of a proposed power dam in Passamaquoddy Bay, and both the United States and Canadian governments are deeply concerned over the possible effect. Dr. Fish hints at the possibility of being able some day, through conservation and scientific data, to control the product of deep-sea fisheries.

MINISTERIAL RELIEF FUND GAINS $13,453

Annual Report of Southern Presbyterian Committee to Note Increase.

LOANS TO 275 STUDENTS

Charlottesville, Va., April 27 (A.P.).—An increase of $13,453.69 in the Southern Presbyterian Church's endowment fund for ministerial relief, making a present total of $1,596,570.45, is related in the annual report of the committee on Christian Education and Ministerial Relief to be made to the seventieth general assembly of the church beginning here May 22. The Rev. H. H. Sweets, of Louisville, Ky., is secretary of the committee.

The fund is to be further increased this year by the birthday offering of the woman's auxiliary of the church, says the report, and its interest will supplement the work of the ministers' annuity fund.

Loans were made last year to 275 students, of whom 136 were women and 139 were men, which was four less than the preceding year. The loans totaled $39,175. Applications from 65 students were declined on account of lack of funds, according to the report.

Two hundred and fifty-five candidates for the ministry were aided; six were helped in the mission field, and 35 young women were aided in various forms of church service, making a total of 296. The Presbyteries reported in March 577 candidates for the ministry and mission service.

In the field of ministerial relief the committee reports aiding the homes of 191 ministers, 258 widows, 53 orphans in 39 deceased ministers' homes and six commissioned lay workers, an increase over activities of the preceding year. Seventeen ministers, twelve widows and one orphan were removed from the rolls by death during the year. To the homes was remitted $198,168, an average of $401.15 a year for each family aided.

The committee received from living donors for current use, $198,206.67; from interest, rent, refunds, &c., $105,645.77 for a total income of $303,852.44. This was a decrease of $49,059.47 from the preceding year.

A debt of $26,235 had been carried over from the preceding twelve months, says the report, and, on account of a decrease in receipts, the committee reports a present debt of $52,180.17, announcing that expenditures are to be reduced so as to come within resources.

Judging from the enthusiasm display by the members of the cast of the Lyon Park minstrel show, the performance this year bids fair to surpass anything previously held. T. F. Gary, general chairman of the affair, announced a number of specialty dancing and vocal acts have been engaged.

Among those on the program are: Wilson Tolford, J. Robert Raeburn, H. C. Young, and C. A. Callis, nde men: Arthur Orr, Henry Hartung, T. P. Gary, E. J. Merrick, jr., C. K. Lewis, and A. A. Moore, soloists; J. P. Brown, A. H. Kautz, H. C. Messner, J. W. Dorsey, W. V. Delaney, and Louis C. Carl, chorus; B. F. Toulotte is interlocutor, and Mrs. J. F. Hardie, jr., will be accompanist.

The committee in charge of the arrangements is L. L. Collie, tickets; A. A. Moore, publicity; Arthur Orr, program; Herbert T. Marks, lights. The show will be held in the community house the evenings of May 2 and 3. The proceeds will be added to the budget for the year.

State Senator Frank L. Ball is to be the principal speaker at the meeting of the Arlington County Civic Federation at 8 o'clock Tuesday night, May 6, in the Lyon Park community house. Senator Ball will discuss the session of the General Assembly, paying particular attention to those bills passed affecting Arlington County.

The Master Plumbers Association of Arlington County is completing its plans for its annual dance in the Odd Hall at Clarendon Wednesday night. The committee in charge consists of H. C. Messner, chairman; William E. Wolff, E. H. Birch, C. P. Nicholas, W.aJ. Cavanaugh, A. R. McGonegal, and Stephen Childs.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Walkers Chapel will give a chicken dinner in the chapel Thursday night from 5:30 to 7 o'clock.

The Arlington County Health Department announces the preschool dental clinics for the month of May as follows: Cherrydale, May 1; Clarendon, May 5 and 6, and Virginia Highlands, May 7. The clinics will be conducted from 9 to 12 in the morning and from 1 to 4 in the afternoon.

The Clarendon Loyal Temperance Legion holds its monthly meeting Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of the director, Miss Florence Cauffmann, 441 Wilson boulevard.

Arlington Chapter, No. 39, Order of the Eastern Star, will give a chicken luncheon tomorrow at the home of Mrs. LeRoy Hammond at 1 o'clock. Following the luncheon cards will be played.

Crash Hurts Policeman Answering Fire Alarm

While hurrying to answer a fire alarm at the Methodist Church in Glen Echo, Corpl. Oscar Gaither, 32 years old, Montgomery County motorcycle policeman, was thrown about 50 feet when his motorcycle collided with a truck of the Bethesda Fire Department.

He was first taken to Dr. Benjamin Perry by Edward K. Catwood, constable, and later treated by the Bethesda Volunteer Fire First Aid Squad.

Upon being taken to Georgetown Hospital afterward, his injuries were said to consist chiefly of bruises and abrasions. His condition was not serious.

Radio to Link Brothers After 57-Year Silence

Pittsburgh, April 27 (A.P.).—Two brothers who have not seen nor talked with each other for 57 years will converse tomorrow morning by radio over more than 9,000 miles of land and sea. American radio listeners who tune in on Station KDKA at 7:30 a. m. can listen in on their conversation.

F. C. Watson, 80, will speak a "hello" into the telephone at his home in Zwickley near here. W8XK, the short wave transmitter of KDKA, will relay the message on a wave length of 25.4 meters to VK2ME, at Sydney, Australia, and the "hello" will reach the ears of Samuel J. Watson, 72, over a loud speaker at his side in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Fred Todd, at Forbes, New South Wales, approximately 100 miles from Sydney.

Mayoralty Goes Begging.

Charles Town, W. Va., April 27—(Special).—The annual town election will be held here on May 22. A mayor and four councilmen are to be named. Mayor G. K. Wysong, who has served for the past six years, has announced he will not be a candidate for reelection. So far the citizens have not been able to induce anyone to enter the race, and it seems to be going begging.

SIGNATURES GAINED FOR EXTRA ELECTION

Arlingtno County Petitions to BeGiven School Board Wednesday Night.

FIRE THREATENS HOME

ARLINGTON COUNTY.
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Having made a study of the needs of the county schools after the report of the United States Bureau of Education recommending a bond issue of $640,000, the special committee of the Parent-Teacher Association is making rapid progress in the securing of signatures to the petition asking a special election, Chairman Arthur Orr announced last night.

Mr. Orr stated that the committee intends to submit the petition to the county school board Wednesday night at the courthouse. It is understood that the school board then will file the petition with the judge of the circuit court, asking that a special election date be set.

It has been stated by County Superintendent Fletcher Kemp that if the election is held the latter part of May and assuming that it is favorable to the issue, work will be under way early in July and many of the buildings ready for the fall opening of school.

The burning of brush along the military road in Radnor Heights yesterday narrowly missed causing the loss of the home of Paul Potter. Gaining rapid headway, the fire was eating its way into the yard of Mr. Potter when engines from Clarendon and Ballston arrived. With the aid of chemicals the firemen soon had the fire under control, causing no property damage. Again the chiefs of the several fire departments warned that wherever any brush fire is started persons at no time should leave it alone until it is burned out.

Wealthy Bachelor Dies of Exposure

Cumberland Man Stricken by Paralysis Alone in His Bungalow.

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 27.—Howard N. Gurley, 48, wealthy bachelor, died at Allegany Hospital today. Death was caused by exposure. Mr. Gurley, who had not been feeling well, had sought his bungalow at Bowling Green, near the Cumberland Fair Grounds, on Friday, April 18, although he had lodgings on Union street, in the city. Soon after his arrival he was evidently stricken with paralysis. It happened that friends visited his bungalow yesterday. Mr. Gurley was found lying on the floor amid surroundings of utmost disorder. For eight days he had lain without aid, and the condition of things showed his attempts to give an alarm.

Dr. Thomas W. Koon, who was called, said in all his experience he had never witnessed a human being in such a plight. Mr. Gurley was desperately weak, but when a glass of water was offered him, he almost leaped for it.

An older brother, Dr. Lycurgus N. Gurley, a leading practitioner of Johnstown, Pa., reached his brother's bedside a half hour before he died. Mr. Gurley leaves two other brothers, Frank and Oscar C. Gurley, and three sisters, Mrs. John Bowen, Mrs. Ira M. Long, Erie, Pa., and Mrs. Walker Wentling.

URBAN POPULATION IN SOUTH INCREASES

Rural Districts Show Some Decline in Early Returns of Census.

INDUSTRIES ARE FACTOR

Atlanta, Ga., April 27 (A.P.).—Industry in the South is drawing heavily upon rural population, a study of census reports from nine States reveals. Population of towns and cities in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas show surprising increases due largely to industrial expansion in those States, authorities on the question said.

However, while the centers of population grew rapidly from 1920 to 1930, the rural section either lost population or barely held their own.

The situation is very much the same in all Southern States except Florida, which had a general increase. Its urban centers almost doubled their population in many cases, while its rural sections showed steady growth. Lakeland, for example, which is one of the few cities of more than 10,000 to report, has a population of 18,544, an increase of 165 per cent during the ten years.

Growth of Citrus Industry.

Growth of the citrus industry and popularity of Florida's cities as resorts are directly responsible for the great increase, census supervisors said.

In other Southern States, however, the lack of growth of rural sections and the amazing increase of cities' population are the early features of census returns.

Lynchburg, Va., for example, an old Southern town, underwent an industrial revival during the ten years and now shows a population of 40,559, an increase of more than 10,000. Roanoke, in the same State, increased its population 18,254 and now has a count of 69,096.

All textile centers in North Carolina show remarkable increases. None of the large cities has reported. In that State rural sections held their own generally, possibly because of good market for tobacco, authorities said, the same situation existed in South Carolina. Spartanburg increased its population to 28,525 and other cities grew in proportion.

There were decreases in many Georgia rural sections, but the cities had a healthy growth. Atlanta, excluding the boroughs which form Greater Atlanta, had a count of 266,557, an increase of 35.6 per cent. Columbus has 42,871 residents, an increase of 37.7 per cent.

Illegal Fish Traps Destroyed.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 27 (Special).—Five big fish traps were destroyed along the Shenandoah River yesterday by District Game and Fish Supervisor Charles E. Beard and a deputy. Nearly 100 fish were trapped in the boxes. No one was apprehended in connection with operation of the traps, which are illegal under West Virginia law.

MONROE DEDICATION TAKES PLACE TODAY

Ash Lawn Ceremony to Be Witnessed by Notables at Charlottesville.

OLD ESTATE RESTORED

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 27.—Ash Lawn, historic home of James Monroe, fifth President of the United States and author of the Monroe Doctrine, will be formally dedicated as a national shrine tomorrow, the 172d anniversary of the birth of Monroe.

This landmark was recently purchased by Jay W. Johns, of Pittsburgh, who is restoring it as nearly as possible to the way it appeared during the 26 years it was occupied by Monroe. Many notables from every section of the country will visit the shrine tomorrow, including a delegation from the James Monroe High School of New York City.

Monroe was a near neighbor of Thomas Jefferson, for Ash Lawn is just two miles east of Monticello, and on the same road leading east out of Charlottesville.

There are many spots associated with the fifth President of the United States in and around Charlottesville. The old office where he practiced law is on the grounds of the University of Virginia, and when the new building for the teaching of social sciences was completed this spring, less than 100 yards away, it was named Monroe Hall in his honor.

Boxwood Garden a Feature.

Monroe was a member of the first board of visitors of the University of Virginia along with two other Presidents of the United States, Thomas Jefferson, the first rector, and James Madison.

One of the most beautiful features of Ash Lawn is the boxwood. This old garden is one of the lovely spots that will be pointed out to visitors in Virginia during garden week.

Prior to Monroe's sojourn at Ash Lawn, a Frenchman, Justin Pierre Plumard, Comte de Rieux, had lived there. In 1779 Gov. Henry had sent Philip Mazzei, a friend of Jefferson's, to Europe as Virginia's agent abroad during the Revolution. De Rieux met Mazzei's stepdaughter, Maria Margherita Martin, and married her in Paris.

No Record of Purchase.

In 1784, four years after their marriage, the young couple came to America and went to Colle, Mazzei's home near Monticello. A little later they moved to what is now Ash Lawn. As no record of the purchase can be found, it is presumed that Mazzei gave to De Rieux the 150 acres comprised in the farm.

De Rieux had been brought up at Versailles and had served as captain of the bodyguard of Louis XVI. The boxwood gardens at Ash Lawn are delightfully French and it seems probable that they were planned and planted by this Frenchman, freshly come from the formal parterres of the palace. In 1790 De Rieux sold the place to Anthony Mullins, who sold it to Monroe in 1802.

The garden at Ash Lawn is laid out to form an oval, at the exact center of which towers a great Norwegian pine, brought to America from Europe by Monroe when he was building the homestead. The perimeter of the garden consists of a hedge of English dwarf-box, and is flanked by an extremely tall boxhedge, the terminal apexes being especially striking and beautiful.

GAYETY

Forty-eight black and white performers and Mat Mannix and his Gayety Troubadours, "Rarin to Go," greeted Gayety audiences yesterday Ed Daleys presents one of the greatest black and white attractions ever assembled on the Gayety stage in this week's superattraction. Pretty Louise Miller and Joe Yule garner the honors in the white portion of the performance. Miss Miller, a dazzling brunette, displayed some unusual talent in going through her numbers. Her specialty brought down the house. Joe went through with the same comic antics which he displayed when he made "Bare Facts" famous last season. Able assistance is given by Lena Daly, a pretty blonde; Sally Van, a snappy soubrette, and Miss Day, a twinkling brunette.

Plenty of pep stands out in the black portion of the show. Some fast and snappy dancing, singing of many "blues songs" and several old-time Southern secenes give "Rarin to Go" a high rating.

Auction and amateur nights have been called off this week, due to the length of the regular show. Next week "The Mutual Follies" will be led by Charlie Golden, Hap Fryer and beautiful Lola Pierce.

THE NEW WEEK'S BILLS

PALACE

"FREE AND EASY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, starring Buster Keaton in his first dialogue, singing and dancing role, with all-star support led by Anita Page and Trixie Friganza. Directed by Edward Sedgwick. Reviewed Saturday night.

By NELSON B. BELL

Harold Lloyd, Laurel and Hardy and one or two others of lesser consequence having already made the grade, Buster Keaton now takes his place among the small group of screen comedians of the first flight to whim audibility has proved a help rather than a handicap. In this fast-moving, stentorian and continuously hilarious subject, the dead-pan comic offers a little of the best of everything he has ever done in the silent films, plus a voice which in itself points many a laugh, sufficient singing ability to put over his numbers and a nimbleness in dance that suggests the Fred Stone of prealrplane days. His best picture by a long hop, skip and jump and a gun shot!

To the extent that it is participated in by a large number of distinguished members of the film colony, not directly concerned in the development of the major plot, and reveals a great deal of the inner workings of the studios, "Free and Easy" performs the same function for the audible screen that the satirically pretentious "Hollywoood" did for the silent.

The action hinges upon the attempt of her small-town manager and her mother to launch Elvira Plunkett, winner of a Kansas beauty contest, on a successful movie career in Hollywood. As in the case of "Hollywoood," the beauty winner gets nowhere, while Elmer Butts, her manager, and her Amazonian mamma become noted stars of comedy.

This all comes about after a dazzling premiere performance at Grauling man's Chinese Theater, and Elmer's cyclonic progress through the studios one leap ahead of the cop he has eluded at the gate. It is this catastrophic chase through the huge plant that makes it possible for Buster Keaton to nullify the productional efforts of such noted directors and players as Lionel Barrymore, Cecil De Mille, Fred Niblo, John Miljan, Gwen Lee, Karl Dane and Dorothy Sebastian, while at the premiere he becomes distressingly involved with William Haines, William Collier, sr., Jackie Coogan and an army of others.

More intimately concerned with the career of Elvira Plunkett are Anita Page, in that role; Trixie Friganza, her mother; Robert Montgomery, as Larry Mitchell, the matinee idol, and, of course, Keaton in the role of Elmer.

The peculiar pattern upon which th picture is fashioned permits the introduction of many musical numbers, dances, spectacular musical scenes and whatnot. The snappiest of the songs is "Free and Easy," in which Keaton discloses surprising talent as a hoofer. Fred Niblo, former vaudeville monologist, legitimate actor and travelogue lecturer, plays a considerable part through several sequences.

On the stage Wesley Eddy achieves another enthusiastic welcome with the Loew "Days of Yore" unit. The revue harks back to the gay 90's for its beer garden atmosphere, and, among other things, introduces a Percheron chorus that would have brought joy to the heart of Billy "Beef Trust" Watson in the days of his heftiest ensembles.

In addition to introducing Nat Spira, 300-pound singing comedian; Edna Howard, leader of the "Ten Tiny Tots;" the Chevalier Brothers, dress suited gymnasts, and King, King and King, probably the foremost tap dancers on the stage, Mr. Eddy himself sings "Ol' Man River," "St. James Infirmary Blues" and "A Year From Today." stages his humorous skit of "The King With the Terrible Temper" and leads the Palace Syncopators through several spirited numbers.

The N. V. A. appeal comprised the only other feature of the performance I attended.

RIALTO

"CAPTAIN OF THE GUARD." A Universal presentation of a story suggested by Houston Branch's "La Marseillaise," adapted for the screen by Arthur Ripley, costarring John Boles and Laura La Plante. Directed by John S. Robertson. Reviewed Saturday night (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

For those who still yearn for those good old days when motion pictures really moved, "Captain of the Guard" may be unhesitatingly recommended. In weaving this drama of the French national anthem, sound in all its various aspects has been so admirably employed that any grating on one's auricular or artistic sensibilities is entirely obviated.

The same restraint that prompted the producers to state that the picture was "suggested by" and not "adapted from" a story, and to admit certain liberties were taken with both story and history, permeates the entire production. The action is convincing; the settings contrasting regal splendor and dire poverty are not overdrawn; the characterizations are well delineated, and the songs and incidental music—all these and more—combine to make a memorable evening.

"Captain of the Guard" is, in essence, a two-character picture, and for the pivotal roles better actors than John Boles and Laura La Plante could not, perhaps, be found. Mr. Boles, as Rouget de Lisle, is a convincing lover composer, and aristocratic revolutionist. His renditions of "For You" and "You, You Alone," from the pen of the distinguished Charles Wakefield Cadman, being especially well sung.

No less laudable is the role of Marie, played by Miss La Plante, as the peasant lass who later feeds the fires of freedom. This phase of the part, where she assumes "The Torch" as a nom de guerre, is strikingly reminiscent of Tessa Kosta's inspired characterization in "The Song of the Flame."

Rounding out the program is "Sixteen Sweets," a revuelet with some delightful dance numbers; a release of the Universal News with Graham MacNamee newscasting, and a brief overture by the house orchestra.

LITTLE THEATER

"DAMAGED SOULS." Public Welfare Pictures Corporation production, starring Corliss Palmer. Reviewed Sunday night, second week (for men only).

This week the Little Theater will be set aside exclusively for men to view "Damaged Souls," which will be shown in conjunction with special reels produced exclusively for male audiences.

This picture is unusual in that it is frank and to the point. It hesitates at nothing to get over its story which deals with the subject of traffic in souls.

"Damaged Souls" has the famous prize winning beauty, Corliss Palmer, for its star.

The story is one of contrast, small town morals against big town evils, with their nets for the faltering steps of adventurous young womanhood unfamiliar with the traps set for them once they cross the dividing line between the urban and the suburban influences.

FOX

"SUCH MEN ARE DANGEROUS." Fox production of original story by Elinor Glyn, with adaptation and dialogue by Ernest Vadja, featuring Warner Baxter, supported by Hedda Hopper, Catherine Dale Owen, Albert Conti and Claude Allister. Directed by Kenneth Hawks. Reviewed Sunday afternoon.

Although her principal inspiration seems to have been derived from the mysterious case of the Lowenstein disappearance from an airplane crossing the English Channel, Mme. Glyn, in fashioning this tensely dramatic play also seems to have been influenced no little by the possibilities of plastic surgery, as demonstrated in that twice-made earlier picture, "Skin Deep." She drops the foremost male character of her fable from his own private plane over the English Channel and then has him completely metamorphosed from an elderly and ugly money-grubber, whose bride could not endure his presence, to a youthful and handsome young boulevardier, with whom she fell honestly and desperately in love.

The story seems to me to be a wholly new departure for Elinor Glyn. It is a strongly dramatic tale with none of the impassioned investitures with which the Glyn fictions usually are embellished. It embodies much fine characterization, a wealth of competent acting and seems to me deficient only in the pace at which it moves. The opening sequences of the narrative, elaborate and important as they are, drag terrifically.

As Ludwig Kranz, one of the richest, most powerful and most repellent men in the world, who becomes Pierre Villard, handsome young romanticist, Warner Baxter offers a thoughtful, sharply contrasted and thoroughly skilled performance. Catherine Dale Owen, whom I liked immensely in "The Rogue Song," where I deemed her austerity entirely appropriate, in the role of Elinor, the rebellious bride, opposite Mr. Baxter, ambles through a part of fine possibilities with an icy stoniness that leaves a great deal to be desired from every standpoint save only that of coldly chiseled pictorial beauty. As her avaricious sister, Muriel, Hedda Hopper is so delightfully efficient as to be vastly disliked a good deal of the time, and Claude Allister, as her fop of a husband, contributes another of his superbly polished silly ass Englishmen. As secretary to Kranz, Albert Conti preserves the high flavor of continental savoir faire upon which the proper atmosphere for the events visualized so much depends.

The Fanchon and Marco "Far East" revue, occupying the stage, is a colorful and exotic tour of Mongolian, Korean and Javanese episodes that enlist the services of a large group of capable specialists, under the guidance of Alexander Callam, master of ceremonies. Nee Wong, the "Ukulele Ike" of the Philippines; Ruth Kadamatau, Chinese songstress with a distinctly American manner; Cowan and Gray, acrobats and dancers; Frank Stever, barytone; Helen Pachaud, dancer; M. Banami & Co., and Three Jacks and Two Queens, an adagio team, comprise the personnel supported by the Sunkist Beauties.

In memory of last week's musically distinguished three days, Mr. Brusiloff and the Fox orchestra offer Tobani's "Echoes of the Metropolitan Opera House" as the unusually well played overture. The N. V. A. drive occupied the remainder of the running time.

EARLE

"LADIES LOVE BRUTES." Paramount production, adapted from the play "Pardon My Glove," by Zoe Akins. Starring George Bancroft, supported by Mary Astor and Fredric March. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Reviewed Saturday night by C. Ransom.

Whether the title of this film is a lie in itself matters not at this moment, but it unquestionably belies the film. This is another instance of a civilized output being named, apparently just from the long habit of the movies, so as to make a special appeal to the uncivilized. Here we have a rather fine story, intelligently phrased and admirably played, about a strong man who is anything but brutish, and the love for him of just one lady of the very type that would find brutish men repulsive. And along comes somebody and announces this to the world as "Ladies Love Brutes." This may be good Box Office, and certainly it is a week of crowds at the Earle. Still, the writer knows four people who declined to accompany him Saturday night, solely on account of the title. And they would all have enjoyed the picture immensely.

George Bancroft for once lifts his powerful frame out of the underworld and appears as a vigorous enemy of racketters, literally on the constructive side of life. He is Joe Forsiati, son of Italian immigrants, who has made his millions building New York skyscrapers. He masters his grafting opponents as he has made his way, by sheer courage and honest strength. In his business contacts he comes to realize that his slightly uncouth personality bars him from certain lines of advancement. In his campaign to break the barriers, beginning with a Fifth avenue tailor, he meets a woman of wealth and refinement, separated from her husband, and she is attracted by his devotion to her, his rugged force of character and his simple and lovable traits.

Here is a real and fascinating conflict of social types, enough in itself for completion of the drama. But for a climax and finish there is an abrupt turn of plot to a wild tale of kidnaping, so that Joe may have another chance to fight his way out. There is a false note here and a lowering of the level, but nevertheless the interest of the story is well maintained to the end.

George Bancroft has never had a part that fitted him better and his management of the character is masterly. Mary Astor is delightful as Mimi and her mature acting places her in the first rank of pleasing players of the talking films. And there are a dozen lesser characters, all excellently done, including Mimi's husband, played by Fredric March.

The direction shows an imaginative feeling for significant details and an adherence to truth that slips only once or twice. Altogether, this is a production that should not be missed.

For shorts, Charlie Murray is seen in a political comedy that has its spots of good fun, and the news pictures are interesting.
